Canton, O., November 4.—At 11 o'clock twenty-five of the sixty-four voting precincts in Stark county give McKinley a net gain of 1,084, to overcome a plurality of 1,081 in 1889. Up to this hour but eight precincts have been heard from outside of Stark county, and they give a net gain of 160 only, making the total gain in districts so far as heard from 1,244 in thirty-three precincts, with a total of 129 precincts to overcome 3,900 majority. The tabernatic where Major McKinley is surrounded by 500 enthusiastic citizens, with as many outside trying to get in, presents a scene of enthusiasus not equalled even in any part of this most remarkable campaign. Just now, at 11:30, when the great gains were coming in, cheer after cheer went up, and cries of "McKinley" were repeated so often that finally he arose, and advancing to the front of the stage, he spoke, saying that he appeared to thank them for this cordial welcome and whatover might be the result.

If the balance of the precincts keep up the ratio of increase begun, McKinley will be elected by a handsome majority. When he spoke he had already been given a handsome vindication by his home county, carrying his own ward, his own city and his own county, which has been democratic; his own ward making a gain of nearly 400.

CLEVELAND WILL BE THERE. The Thurman Banquet Will Be a Happy Affair.

Columbus, O., November 4.—Alian W. He also writes that Mrs. Cleveland has decided that she cannot come. Tickets to the banquet were mailed last evening to Hon. Daniel Lockwood and General Doyle, of Buffalo, N. Y., for themselves and friends; Governor Jackson, of Maryland; Hon. Walter S/Logan and John H. Inman, of New York city; Charles S. Reemelin and William Burnett, of Cincinnati, and John A. LITTLE ROCK, November 4.—The election was quiet and without incident here and only about half the vote was polled. Terry, democrat for congress, running 1,485 to 1,143 for Harrison, republican. This, the fourth, is a strong democratic district and partial returns from points in half a dozen counties indicate a small vote every-where. Dispatches from Clarksville estimate Terry's majority at 50c in Johnson county. A Gazette special from Searcy says indications point to a heavy vote in White county and a large democratic gain. This township, which gave Eagle, democrat, 60 majority, gives Breckenridge 165 majority for the short term and 164 for the long term, and eight townships out of thirty gave Breckenridge 422 majority, which points to 600 to 700 majority in the county. JACKSONVILLE, Fla., November 4.—Reports from all sections of the state report that the weather was perfectly clear and cool. A heavy vote was polled everywhere, but it may fall short of previous years by the reason that large numbers of electors were disqualitied for non-payment of polltax. Republicans in this county, Duval, have lost heart somewhat. It will probably go demogratic by 450 majority. The second congressional district will be close. Bullock democrat, leads in this county.

Up to midnight returns from over 100 towns show an increase in democratic majorities, and indicate that the state has gone democratio by 15,000 or 16,000 majority.

A Ocala special to the Times-Union says Bullock, democratic candidate for the second con-lock, democratic candidate for the second con-gressional district, estimates his majority over Stripling at 4,500. His majority in 1888 was 3,105.

INDIANA. INDIANAPOLIS, November 4.—The day was fect throughout the entire state, clear and crisp, and in ofties and towns generally a legal holiday. A prominent feature was the working of the new Australian ballot system, curiosity as to its operations serving to bring out a large vote which otherwise showed symptoms of being apathetic. In this city there was a heavy vote early. The stringent provisions of the new law prevented any considerable crowd from gathering near the polls, and the result was that no rows were reported, and but few arrests for illegal voting were made. Some confusion was caused by complications in the manner of preparing the tickets, and some will probably be thrown out in nearly every precinct, but taken as a whole the new system worked satisfactorily.

President Harrison and Attorney General Miller arrived at 10 o'clock and were driven to the residents.

President Harrison and Attorney General Bull-arrived at 10 o'clock and were driven to the resi arrived at 10 o'clock and were driven to the residence of Mr. McKec, the president's son-in-law, when, after a light lunch, they were driven to the polling place in the second ward. At 11:30 o'clock when the president entered the room he spoke to the judges and clerks severally, shaking hands with those he knew personally. In answer to a question as to how long he would remain, he replied he would return to Washington this afternoon. When is the set of resurrate, his ballet to noon. When in the act of returning his ballot to the inspector, one of the judges said: "Well, it is plain Ben Harrison now." "Tes," replied the president, and only counts one."

The president's vote was the 152d that was cast in the precinct, and the next man who exercised the suffrage was Dan Bressenan, democrat, whose vote canceled the president's, as Bressenan voted the straight democratic ticket. After depositing his ballot, the president returned to the residence of Mr. McKee, where he remained until 4:30, when he was driven to the station and took the train for Washington. During the afternoon a few personal or political friends called, and at the train quite a crowd had gathered to see him off.

CHICAGO, November 4.—The election in this city, though botly contested, passed off very quietly. The day opened cool and clear, but the sky became overcast and rain was threatened. Later the clouds broke away and the sun again appeared. The polls opened at 6 o'clock and closed at 4 o'clock p.m. The chief interest centered in the contest for the shrievalty between Congressman Frank Lawler, democrat, and James H. Gilbert, republican. An element of interest was also injected into the contest for the position of county superintendent of public schools by the of county superintendent of public schools by the candidacy of Mrs. General Mulligan, who was the and her opponent, Albert G. Lane, a protestant, and the public school question was used for the purpose of turning democratic votes. From 6 to 8 o'clock the voting was rapid, and sending majorities up in the hundreds, but later, when the sun began to shine and the air became warmer, the republicans began to arrive at the polling places. They held no conversation with ticket peddlers, but took from their vest pockets neatly folded tickets, the contents of which none bu folded fickets, the contents of which none but themselves knew. Men who had not been to the polls for years visited them today and east their ballots for the republican candidates.

This was really the strong point of the republican side of the battle. Work had been done on registration day. In short, Cook county has not had an election in many years, if ever, where the rich and aristocratic came out in such numbers to rich and aristocratic came out in such numbers to vote. Through an error in the distribution, re-publican ballots failed to reach some of the out-lying wards at the opening of the polls and many voters were obliged to come into the city to attend to their business without voting. To the agitation on the compulsory school question and the uncertain strength of the ticket of the citizens and Patriotic Sons of America, is due, to a great extent, the scratching of the re-spective state tickets here. The so-called citi-zens' ticket contained only the names of native born Americans, and was made up of two leading parties, with now and then a prohibitionist where the two principal parties happened to have both nominated foreign born citizens for the same par-ticular office. The citizens' ticket, which the local politicians dubbed the "Knownothing ticket," claimed a vote of 15,000 in Cook county, but the returns would indicate that they did not poll half of that number. The centest in the four city congressional districts was a largely personal on and the tariff issue was, in a large measure, los sight of.

Cannon's election is claimed by the republican committee by a majority of 500.

Of the twenty congressional districts in IIII.

KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., November 4.—The election passed off quietly. The weather was very fine with but little interest and a light vots. Demo-crats were probably elected in all districts, except the eleventh, where Wilson has a republican majority of 8,000 in part to count on, and Paynter in the ninth, has a fight, but will win. The judgment of all parties is that 300,000 votes will judgment of all parties is that 300,000 votes will be polled. Intense interest is centered in four congressional districts, the first, third, sixth and seventh. Only a few dispatches have been re-ceived here, but they show a large vote is being polled. In Osage county many farmers' alliance-men deserted the alliance candidates and are vot-ing for Humphrey, republican, for governor, and Robinson, republican, for congress. Similar reports come from Marshall and Cloud counties. It is is estimated that this county (Shawnee) will give Humphrey 15,000 plurality. Very few votes are being polled here for Willits, alliance. In the third ward one-half the vote was polled at noon and republicans have threat to me.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., November 4.—Dispatches from Kansas indicate that for the first time in many years Kansas sends a broken republican delegation to congress. It is considered certain that Moonlight, democrat, will defeat Broderick, republican, and S. C. LOUISIANA.

NEW ORLEANS, November 4.—The weather has been delightful all day and the elections, as far as known at this hour (4 p. m.), have been quiet throughout the state.

The vote was comparatively light. The present incumbents, all democrats, have been undoubt-edly elected in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth congressional districts. In this city the vote was congressional districts. In this city the vote was not heavy and some fears were entertained by the democrats that Logan might be defeated from this cause, until news was received from Jefferson parish that the whites and blacks were voting for Logan. It is now claimed that parish will go democratic, which it has never before done, thus defeating Coleman almost beyond doubt. Como, colored, of Jefferson, who bolted the republican convention, was captured by the democrats. His influence seems to have settled the fate of Cole-man. Gransoen, independent labor candidate, in emocrats that Logan might be defeated from

The latest returns indicate that Meyer, demo crat, has defeated Warmoth, republican, for congress in the first district by 2,000 majority, and that Logan, democrat, has defeated Coleman, republican, for congress in the second district, by 3,000. In other districts there was no organized opposition to the democrats, and the following were re-elected to congress: Third district, Andrew Price; fourth, W. H. Blanchard; fifth, C. J. Jackson, Miss., November 4 .- [Special.] -The democratic state committee has received returns enough at 10:20 o'clock tonight to assure the elec-cion of a solid democratic delegation to congress. Clark Lewis overwhelmingly defeats Frazee in the Lewis overwhelmingly defeats Frazee in the fourth, some counties not voting at all for Frazee. In the fifth there were only a few scattering votes for Pitts against Beeman, democratic candidate. In the sixth Griffin, republican, made a spurt in some of the sea coast towns, but Stockdale's majority will not be less than 4,000. In the seventh district Matthew's candidacy met with no favor with the percess, who failed to go for the polls. Hooker's negroes, who failed to go to the polls. Hooker's majority will be 5,000. No trouble reported anywhere. Only about 60 per cent of the white vote cast, and not over 30 per cent of the negro vote came to the polls.

MASSACHUSETTS.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston, November 4.—11:30 p. m.—Henry Cabot Lodge is re-elected without doubt in the sixth congressional district, but he admits that his majority will not be much over 1,000 in place of about 5,300 two years ago. In the first district, Randall, republican, is re-elected. In the second, E. A. Morse, republican, is re-elected. In the third, Andrew, democrat, is re-elected. In the first district, O'Neil, democrat, is re-elected. DETROIT, November 5.—1:30 a. m.— The present indications from meager sources of information are that the democrats have carried the first, second, fifth, seventh, eighth and tenth congressional districts, with possibilities in the sixth, ninth and fourth. Chipman's election in the first is conceded. The others are not verified.

promptly this morning in every election district, and the work of voting under the new ballot law began without delay. During the night the booths within which the voters were obliged to retire had been erected in the polling places. The stationary been erected in the polling places. The stationary law required to be provided and placed in these official ballots and hallot boxes arranged in place and everything in readiness for the voters. There were unusually large numbers of workers about the polls, the Beople's Municipal League alone supplying a small army themselves. Politicians of every party made unusual efforts to get out a full vote and to get it in early. The voting, in consequence of the requirements of the new law, proceeded more slowly than usual, but with greater steadiness, and at noon a greater proportion of registered voters than is customary at that hour had east their ballots. The new ballot law did not seem to interfere, to any extent, lot law did not seem to interfere, to any extent, with voting in the tenement house districts. The voters had been diligently instructed in the use of the posters and far more of them than of the original official ballots were used.

In almost every district, however, some citizens lost their votes through a failure to comply with the provisions of the law within the prescribed ten minutes. A large number of those who thus lest minutes. A large number of those who thus lost their votes were citizens possessing education and intelligence, but who had failed to acquaint themselves with the details of the law. The overcast look of the morning caused many apprehensions to the fusionists, but as the skies became clear their hopes were renewed. Indications were that the bulk of votes would be in early. There was no use in hanging back among those of easy vitue until in hanging back among those of easy virtue until along near the closing time when their vote in a tight contest would be in great demand. Every man seemed free under the new law. He could listen with apparent attention to the solicitation of heelers and go and vote against them withou their being any wiser. The supreme court justices took turns in sitting from 6 o'clock in the morning in order to give any complaining voter a chance to be heard.

NORTH CAROLINA.

RALEIGH, N. C.. November 4.—[Special.]—The election returns have come in slowly and estimates of the result will have to be given in nearly all cases. Heavy gains are made by the democratic state ticket, headed by Merryman for chief justice, the republican candidate falling far behind his ticket at many noints. The legislarure is justice, the republican candidate failing far behind his ticket at many points. The legislature is largely democratic, and there are probably democratic gains in this direction as in others. The congressional returns are full only in the fourth district, and show the election of B. H. Bunn, democrat, by a largely increased majority. There are astonishing gains by the democrata in the second district of the second districts of the second districts of the second districts. ishing gains by the democrats in the second district, but H. P. Cheatham, republican, is in all probability elected. There is no ground for doubt that the democrats have elected W. A. B. Branch in the first district, B. F. Grady in the third, A. H. A. Williams in the fifth, S. B. Alexander in the sixth and John S. Hendersen in the seventh. In the absence of returns it may be said that there is little ground for doubt that the democrats elect W. H. H. Cowles in the eight district and W. T.

W. H. H. Cowles in the eight district and W. T. Crawford in the ninth. The election was quiet at all points heard from, and the negro independents figured more prominently than ever before.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., November 4.—[Special.]—The indications tonight, at 12 o'clock, show that North Carolina has made big democratic gains. The state ticket is elected by an increased majority, and eight out of the nine congressmen are undoubtedly elected. In the first district W. A. B. Branch, democrat, of Beaufort county, is elected to succeed T. G. Skinner, democrat. H. G. Cheatham, colored republican, succeeds himself in the second district. B. F. Grady, of Duplin county, democrat, succeeds Mr. McClammy, democrat, in the third district, and Bunn, democrat, is re-elected in the fourth by an increased majority. In the fifth district A. H. A. CINCINATI, November 4.—With the exception if a fow saloon keepers who violated the law by keeping their places open on election day, there were no arrests in the city today on account of the election. The law which has been in effect several years prohibits the gathering within one hundred feet of polling places, and the consequence is that there are no gatherings at all and none of the excitement fostered by crowds is now to be seen at elections. Besides there has been no to be seen at elections. Besides there has been no unusual excitement here during the canvass; no torch light processions, no outdoor meetings. and little of the bitterness or wrangling usually preceding an election. Today's voting was a reflex of the digmided calmness that has marked the conduct of the campaign. Voters approached the polls free from the solicitations of ward workers, and on depositing their ballots loft the place. As a reositing their ballots left the place. As a re depositing their ballots left the place. As a re-sult there were no quarrels, no crime, and voters went about their business confident that under the efficient administration of the registration law, there was no need of scrutiny to see that there was no defeat of the people's will by trick-ery or criminal perversion of the returns.

The division among the democrats caused by the abolishment of the board of city improvements at the suggestion of Governor Campbell, had its effect in general apathy among many of the most active workers in the democratic party. So when the polls closed, there was a general feeling that the republicans had carried the county by a good majority; that Stores, republican, had defeated Cosgrove in the first district, and that Caldwell, republican, in the second district, was re-elected by a handsome majority. The demorats do not generally concede the defeat of Cosgrove, and some of them claim the election of the democratischesie.

CANTON. O., November 4.—Indications at 1:30 o'clock are that a full vote was polled throughout the district. Fully three-fourths of the total vote was east by noon. There seems to be less scratching than reported, although the republicans claim that Warwick is losing votes to McKinley. The democrats, on the other hand, claim that McKinley will run but little ahead of his ticket. Interest in the outcome of the election is so general that business is practically suspended. Major McKinley expresses himself confident of his election.

COLUMBUS, O., November 4.—Later returns greatly decrease the rate of republican gains. One hundred and eighty-nine precincts in Ohio, outside of Hamilton county, give Ryan, secretary of state, 26,439; Crowly, 24,844; Lockwood, 144. The same precincts in 1889 gave boraker, 27,798; Campbell, 26,826; Helwig, 1,514 At this rate the state, outside of Hamilton county, will give the democrats a majority of 3,500, but in Hamilton county the returns indicate a majority CANTON, November 4.-Thirteen precincts in Stark county, out of a total of sixty-four, gives a gain for McKinley over 1889 of 545. McKinley's own ward complete, just in, gives a gain of 385. PROVIDENCE, R. I., November 4 .- The second congressional district is very close. Indications are that there are no election returns from Paw-tucket; not all in. Lapham (democrat) is surely elected in the first district by 1,100 majority.

SOUTH CAROLINA. CHARLESTON, S. C., November 4.—[Special.]-There was no bloodshed in the Palmetto State to day. The election passed off quietly and the regu-lar democratic ticket is elected by a comfortable majority. The negro vote, which was expected to support the independent democratic ticket, and which was promised by the republican state committee, was not delivered. Telegrams from all quarters of the state show that the negroes are too busy picking cotton to fight. This makes it doubtone-fourth of the vote of the state wa polled. In this city but 1,400 votes were polled out of a total of nearly 10,000. At present it is almost certain that the democrats have carried six of the soven congressional districts, although there is still doubt as to the result in the fourth. Miller, republican, has probably carried the seventh district. Returns come in slowly from the seaboard counties. Enough have been received, however, to show that Tillman carries all of them except, per-haps, Beaufort, where the vote is very close. Over in Berkeley the fusion ticket is probably elected althoush-si ted, although ail returns are not in. Haske is developing some strength in Orangeburg, but is hopelessly behind in Hampton and Colleton. Brawley is pretty sure of a majority in the first congressional district, but not nearly as large as it would have been if he had been polled a full democratic vote in Charleston. Miller has probably beaten both Brayton and Elliott in the seventh district. The us thing about the election in this the negro vote.

Chief Supervisor Pioneer has adopted strange tactics here. He has I sued an order to all supervisors at congressional boxes to turn over to the managers the boxes and submit their reports to move.

It is doubtful whether 2,000 negroes bolted the state ticket in South Carolina. They had a big game in their hands, but refused to play. They could have carried two or three congressional districts, but the returns indicate that they have only returned Miller from the seventh district, and that other republicans are defeated. Two hours after the polls opened this morning, Haskell's friends knew that they were defeated. The vote was the smallest ever poiled for governor in this state, and the election was the most quiet on this state, and the election was the most quiet record. Columbia was the only city in t state to give Haskell a majority. The failure the negroes to vote is a mystery.

TEXAS.

Galveston, November 4.—Late returns from the cities show the railroad commission bill running considerably behind the state ticket, but it is undoubtedly carried. TENNESSEE.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., November 4.—The day passed off very quietly, so far as heard from, with a light vote in middle and western Tennessee, democratic strongholds. The Australian ballot law is working beautifully, barring the fact that comparatively few negroes know how to vote under it. The poll-tax qualification also has a tendency to reduce the vote. Buchanan, democratic candidate for governor, virtually has a walk-over over Baxter, republican, and Kelley, prohibitionist. The weather was magnificent, but little interest is being taken.

Reports indicate the election of Butler, independent republican, to congress from the first pendent republican, to congress from the first district over Taylor, regular republican and pres-ent incumbent; Houk, republican, in the second district, over Williams, democrat; McMillin, democrat, in the twentieth; Richardson, democrat, in the fifth; Washington, democrat, in the sixth; Cox, democrat, in the seventh; Enloe, democrat, in the eighth; Pierce, democrat, in the ninth, and Patterson, democrat, in the tenth.

In this city the negroes had been schooled, and, with few exceptions, managed to prepare their ballots.

VIRGINIA.

RICHMOND, Va., November 4 .- [Special.]-The democrats have swept things before them in Vir-ginia. Returns received up to midnight leave little room for doubt that they have elected all ten congressmen, thus giving them a solid delegation in the fifty-second congress. These are the men who will represent the old common-wealth, if the evidence at hand can be relied on: First district, W. O. Jones; second, Dr. J. W. Lawson; third, George D. Wise; fourth, J. F. Espes; fifth, Posey G. Lester; sixth, Paul C. Edmunds; seventh, Charles T. O'Ferrall; eighth, W. H. F. Lee; ninth, John A. Buchanar. tenth, H. St. George Tucker. The six last named are present incumbents, and Wise, of the third district, has been elected six times in succession, but was robbed of his seat by the last congress Messrs. Wise and Tucker had no opposition, and that of Lester, Edmunds and O'Ferrall practically amounted to none.

At midnight Chairman Ellison, who has received messages from nearly all the democratic andidates and county chairmen, gives it as his opinion that the dem every district except the ninth, and all the information that he has received indicates that John A. Buchanan, democrat, will also be returned. The ninth is the only district in which the tariff played any important part.

It was mainly upon this issue that the canva there was made, and it looks as though Buchana has from 500 to 1,000. Epes, in the fourth, has cer tainly defeated Langston, the independent negro candidate, by from 1,000 to 2,000, carrying many republican counties by majorities of as much as 500. There can be no doubt that Lawson is elected in the second by from 500 to 1,500, and Jones's election by from 1,000 to 1,500 is conceded Lee has a safe majority. The returns received from thirty-two counties and two cities, the first second, fourth, eighth and ninth, show large democratic gains in all, except Alexandria City

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., November 4.-There was a very light vote. O'Ferrall's vote in the city s 587; Underwood, prohibitionist, 78. Returns from the first district indicate that Jones, democrat, defeats Brown by upwards of MILWAUKEE. Wis., November 4.—When the polls closed at 5 o'clock this afternoon the most unique and exciting political struggle in the history of the city came to an end. The feature of the day was the activity of the Catholic and Lutheran clergy in marshaling their forces against tne Bennett law. At the polling booth, on the corner of Greenbush and Mitchell streets, on the south side, almost in the shadow of St. Stanislas Catholic church, two Polish priests busied themselves in seeing that each of their countrymen voted as early as possible, and examined his ballet, to make sure that they were cast against the "little schoolhouse." Father Grueza hustled around in the crowd, carrying a little silver-headed cane which he swung in an animated manheaded cane which he swung in an animated man-ner. From this place he posted off to the fourth precinct of the twelfth ward, on Grove street. His precinct of the twelfth ward, on Grove bucch, church is outside the city, in the town of Lake, church is outside the city, in the town of Lake, and he stated triumphantly to all his friends that when he left his precinct there had been only one or two republican votes against 100 democratic. Some curiosity was manifested in the second precinct of the sixth ward, where the Capuchin monks had registered. About 10 o'clock they appeared, twenty-three strong, headed by the father guardian. A crowd gathered at the corner, while they drew up on the sidewalk and went into the booth one by one. Each one was went into the booth one by one. Each one was allowed to cast his ballot without molestation from the republican challengers, as it had been ascertained that they had all been naturalized. Quietly as they had come they went away, and here were twenty-three more democratic in the box.

Most of the Lutheran churches held meetings last night, at which democratic tickets were dis-tributed at the booths. The Lutherans would not have anything to do with peddlers. Some of them would take anything put in their hands and shove it into their pockets, where it was presumably left. The character of the vote cast by them is consequently a mystery. Democrats, of course, claimed that every Lutheran who ap-peared with his ticket in his pocket put in a straight democratic vote. But the other side claims just as confidently that the reason why Lutherans acted so mysteriously was that they wanted to fix their tickets to suit themselves. In today's election the republican's lose one congressman, Mitchell, a democrat, being elected in this district. So far as received returns indicate the election of Cooper, republican, in the first district; Barwig, democrat, in the second; LaFollete, a republican, in the third; Mitchell, a democrat, in the fourth; Brickner, democrat, in the fifth; Clark, republican, in the sixth; Thomas, republican, in the eighth, and Hangen, republican, in the ninth. The democrats claim the election of Peck and the entire democratic state ticket, but returns are too meagre to warrant the claim, and the republicans think Hoard is elected.

MYTHS OF IRELAND.

If you will come with me to the north of Ireland, I will show you the fourth largest lake in Europe, the beautiful Lough Neagh, which, with the attraction of its natural beauties, has also an interesting tradition clinging around it.

The story runneth thus: Once upon a time, long years ago, there was situate in the north of Ireland (right here where you see the lake) a beautiful well renowned for its great depth and its crystalline waters, and was known far and near as the "fairies' well."

The village was favored by the tiny elves, and this fountain was a mark of their good will toward the people. However, the strict injunction was laid upon them, that the water must never be touched by the rays of the sun. Consequently a huge stone was used to cover the well, and the villagers were careful to come early, secure their supply of water for the day, and hasten to cover the opening be-fore his august majesty should mount his glittering chariot, and take his regal way over the mountain tops.

But alas! there is that element in frail human nature which brings with it much sorro w -disobedience. Disobedience to parents makes wicked, bad children-disobedience to the laws of health creates much suffering-disobedience to God fills this beautiful world with daring thieves, reckless murderers and all wreckers of human happiness, and, as you will see, the disobedience of a young girl, so goes the story, to her parents and to the fairies, brought this whole village to grief. Now "listen to my tale of woe."

Coming to the well for water one morning, this fair young girl, Norah, meets a dashing young soldier who stops and assists her to get the water from the well. Sweet, innocent Norah casts shy glances at the handsome stranger, which be intercepts, and smiles at her with evident approval.

The beautiful curves of her graceful figure as she leans over the well, the tiny, bare feet and rounded ankles peeping from under the short red gown, the rebellious mass of curling black hair floating over her shoulders, and the dark-blue eyes, encircled by the proverbial delicately tinted blue shadows which cause them to deepen and darken as she glances over her shoulder, make her a picture well worthy of admiration.

So thinks the young soldier, and the impression grows stronger as they go on, day after day, meeting and exchanging loving glances, with an occasional tender pressure of the hand. But 'tis an old saying that "the course of true love never did run smooth." One unlucky day, the stern parents find them out, and poor Norah is forbidden to see her lover ever again. But the decree is too un-her lover ever again. But the decree is too un-reasonable (I wonder why it is that parents always find it their duty to interfere with all lovers, and why all the world seems to think the affection of young people one for another, to be the affair of any-one who may choose to criticize or advise or to come between, as the case may be, and as they both considered it to be unbe, and as they both considered it to be unreasonable, they resolve to meet at least once again, and so, when the home is wrapped in some and all the quiet, Norah tremblingly steals out, to be soon safely clasped in the loving embrace of one who fain would shield her from all the trouble and sorrow. In vain he pleads with her to go with him, and together they will brave the world.

In vain he tries to persuade her that if she him, rather than her parents.

But Norah is a dutiful daughter, and even now her conscience is warning her of a breach of duty, and tossed in the whirl pool of conflicting emotions, her sense of duty holding her true to her "best friends" while her whole being cries out in sorrow and anguish for the love she is relinquishing, she bids her lover go.

He leaves her in great anger, and she, returning home, spends the long hours of the night in sad and lonely vigil.

Next morning, drooping and heart-broken, she goes as usual to the well for water, and as she approaches whom does she see waiting at the old trysting place but the very being of whom at that moment she was thinking she would never see again? Instinctively she feels that the battle won last night must all be fought over again, and she inwardly prays for strength to resist his pleadings. The poor bruised beart cannot ache more than now, but the tired bosom heaves a weary sigh as she thinks he might have spared her this.

Standing by the well he, renewing his pleadings, and she, so bravely resisting, they have forgotten that the day advances and the sun is steadily rising, until a flash of his saber reminds the young soldier that the well is uncovered. Hastily they strive to lift the stone over the opening, but the sunbeam that had glanced over the saber had danced upon the water, and they find that they cannot cover the well.

The water gushes steadily out, and cannot

The water gushes steadily out, and cannot be stayed until finally the whole village is inundated, and these fortunate young lovers, about to be separated in life, are "united in death."

about to be separated in life, are death."

This, then, is the legend of Lough Neagh, which was originally the fairies' well, and the fishermen on a clear day will show you the spires of the churches in the village buried there.

On Lough Neagh's bank as the faberman strays, when the clear cold eve is declining. He sees the round towers of other days. In the wave beneath him shining: Thus shall memory often, in dreams sublime, Catch a glimpse of the days that are over; Thus, sighing, look through the waves of time. For the long-faded glories they cover.

One of Moore's sweetest melodies is founded upon one of the old Irish myths, the sad fate of the children of Lir.

Tradition says that when Ireland was conquered by the Milesians, the former residents, the Tuatha de Danann, whom some writers believe to have been fairies, held a council and elected a king. Now, all the Tuatha de Danann agreed to be loyed to the chosen monarch, with the exception of one, by name Lir, who refused to acknowledge him. The astonished subjects cried out: "Execute him, put him to death, who dares to turn his back upon our chosen king."

But the wise king chose a better way. He strove to win the friendship of the rebellious subject, and offered him either of his three daughters for a wife. Lir could not resist this tempting offer, and giving in, became loyal to the king. He married Eve, by whom he had daughters for a wife. Lir could not resist this tempting offer, and giving in, became loyal to the king. He married Eve, by whom he had three sons and one daughter—the girl being named Fionnuals. Soon, however, Eve died, and Lir consoled himself by marrying one of the other sisters, Eva. But Eva soon became jealous of the love her husband bore his children, and changed them into band bore his children, and changed them into swans, only allowing them to retain their human voices. She furthermore decreed that they should spend 300 years on the sea of Movle, 300 years on Lake Darvan, and 300 on the Western sea, and that they would never be restored to human form until the sound of a Christian bell should be heard in Ireland. 'Tis said that St. Kemoc disenchanted them, but like Ryder Hagger Hagger 1, "Step her seacond hath in the bell should be neard in Freiand. Its said that St. Kemoc disenchanted them, but like Ryder Haggard's "She," after her second bath in the mystic fire, the 900 years in a human form made them appear rather antiquated, and they soon died, and being baptized by St. Kemoc, made them appear rather anties and tasted, and being baptized by St. Kemoo, went to heaven.

The "Song of Fionnuala," as written by Tom Moore, is as follows:
Slient, O Moyle, be the roar of thy water, Break not, ye breezes, your chain of repose,
While murmuring mournfully Lir's lonely daughter,
Tells to the night star her tale of woes.
When shall the swan, her death-note ringing,
Sleep with wings in darkness furled?
When will Heaven, its aweet bells ringing,
Call my spirit from this stormy world?
Sadly, O Moyle, to thy winter wave weeping,
Fate bids me languish long ages away;
Yet still in her darkness doth Erin lie sleeping,
Still doth the pine light her dawning delay.
When will that day star, mildly springing,
Warm our isle with peace and love?
When will Heaven, its sweet bells ringing,
Call my spirit to the fields above?

LILLA J. HENDERSON. SNAKES IN HIS BED.

"Talking about rattlesnakes," said Jim Con ley, as he perused the interesting snake department of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, while sitting in a crowd of men occupying the outside chairs at McPherson's corner across the way, a few nights ago, "I was an eye-witness and an unwilling participant in one of the bloodiest encounters with a rattlesnake re-corded in the history of Utah territory.

"While traveling in that country between Ogden and Salt Lake City with another man good many years ago, we got 'busted' and had to go to work at anything we could get

"We got a contract from a Mormon settler on the road to cut and haul from the mountains 300 cords of wood. He furnished everything and gave us so much for the job. The camp at which he set us down was six miles away, in the foothills of the range, near where there were a lot of campers cutting and hauling railroad ties to the valley for the Union Pacific

"Things went on admirably, and we were doing nicely, when we took a notion one morn-ing to go down to the ranch and spend the day ing to go down to the ranch and spend the day with our employer and his family.

"We both feit tired from our walk, and retired to bed about 9 o'clock. I had been asleep, I don't know how long, when I awoke feeling a coldness at my back that was not in keeping with the weather, for it was summer, and though the days were extremely hot the nights were cool; but not to the extent of the cold sensation at my back. I began to pull at the wagon sheets with which we were covered, and waked my partner up. Turning over, Bill, in an angry tone, asked:

"What's the matter? Got snakes?"

"No,' I replied, 'but I am as cold as Iceland itself, and want some more cover or I will vacate this bed and build a fire."

"Go to sleep and you'll be all right,' said Bill, and he turned over for a comfortable snooze.

"But I could not go to sleep for that feeling "But I could not go to sleep for that feeling of coldness over behind me, and at last I determined to investigate the cause of it. Reaching behind me with my right hand without turning over, I began to feel around, for it felt exactly like an iceberg lying against me, and my hand soon found its way under and through the folds of the bedding and brought up against something which did not feel natural by any means, and, for the first time the idea of a snake being in had with me entered my mind. "I cautiously withdrew my hand and arm, moved towards Bill and let the cover drop down between me and the object I had felt, and crawled out over my bedfellow's body and from under the cover from the opposite side and left Bill snoozing away. I then called to him to get up and help me to see what it was, in the meantime finding a candle and lighting it.

was, in the meantime finding a candle and lighting it.

With much grumbling, Bill arose from under the cover and began helping me search for the mystery. Turning the cover down, there lay, in comfortable coil, one of the biggest rattlesnakes ever seen in Mormondom.

There lay the rattler, apparently as sound asleep as was Bill a few minutes before. Rushing to the woodyard, I soon returned with an ax and told the crowd to stand back and give me room. Everything being clear, I raised the ax above my head and came down on the coil of the snake with a powerful blow.

"Well, men, that reptile fell into a dozen "Well, men, that reptile fell into a dozen pieces, coiled tightly, as he was, for when I came down with the sharp blade of the axe upon him it had went through him a number of times. It would surprise you to known how much blood a rattlesnake contains. Why, the blood squirted from the ends of all the pieces like a floor sprinkler, thoroughly saturating everything that we could not take out of the way.

"After the excitement had somewhat subsided, we shovelled the pieces out into the yard, and next morning, placing them as closely together as possibles that snake measured 9 feet and 3 inches in length and 3½ inches across the top of his head. From the end of his tail we pulled a string of thirty-two rattles and a 'button,' representing thirty-two years and some months in age."

revealed as soon as commander-Reiter reports in Washington, has brought to light several somewhat similar occurrences that have from time to time taken place in various portions of the world, which show how other governments have dealt with those who have offered indignities to their citizens, says The New York Times.

Among the number is one of which little was ever heard in this portion of the world, although at the time it made considerable stir in the German papers. The Cyclops, Captain Yogelgesang, was making her regular round of calls among the Haytian ports in 1879, and touched at Gonaives just after the opposition to President Solomon had developed into one of those tierce local rebellions that often arose during his regime and rendered an existence in his domain a very precarious one. The soldiers, bribed by golden promises and crazed with rum, had taken possession and were ready to turn their hands toward anything that promised an immediate monetary return. The lives of those who remained faithful to the government were put in jeopardy, and they were obliged to fly for their lives. Some of them sought refuge on board the Cyclops, which had touched at Gonaives to discharge her cargo. When Captain Vogelgesang went ashore he was surrounded by a rabble who insisted upon the instantaneous delivery of the refugees, and hurried the captain into the presence of the general commanding the rebel troops. This functionary received the captain and also insisted on his landing the passengers. The captain said he could not do so without an order from the German consul, who was some distance away, and the interview was closed. The captain returned to the landing place, but had to force his way through the mob. The soldiers frequently threatened to shoot him, and possibly might have done so had not the general appeared. As it was, they laid hands on him and tore a buttom from the breast of his coat (he was in uniform at the time), hustled him about, and altogether subjected him to very rough usage. He got away finally through the intervention of the general, and by telling the people that it was not possible for him to send the refugees away from his ship unless he were allowed first to go on board. He agreed to land them if he got word from the consul before 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and promised not to get away before that hour. He also agreed to blow his steam whistle as a signal that he was about to get under way. With this understanding he was allowed to get into his boat and pull off to the anchorage.

and the anchor engine started to heave in the cable. The troops ashore, not willing that their prey should so easily slip away, had anticipated this movement and had manned the guns of a small battery just below the landing, which commanded the anchorage, fully determined to blow the Cyclops out of the water if she attempted to escape. There was considerable excitement occasioned by the loading of the guns and great dismay and consternation when the steamer, having weighed anchor, turned quietly around, passed close to the guns, and left without a shot being fired. The reason was quite apparent, as the vents of the guns were found securely spiked with nails that had been forced down into the chambers and bent so that they could not be withdrawn.

No cargo could, under the circumstances, be landed or received on board, and as no word came from the consul, who had wisdom enough not to be found, the whistle was blown and the anchor engine started to heave in the Well, rather. They tell a story-in brief just thisthat the fifth district is as solidly democratic as ever.

The republican victory that was talked of yesterday-lost, strayed or stolen! And here in Fulton, oh me! Did you hear something drop, Mr. Buck?

The victory of Colonel Livingston and the party whose representative he is was cer tainly a splendid one. It is one to silence republicanism forever, and it does settle it. The Victory in Fulton.

The story of Fulton's victory is told in the details of the work in each ward. Only a word in addition to what is given below, and that is a word in commendation of the splendid work done by President Harvey Johnson and some of the members of the Young Men's Democratic League, who spent the day at the polls working for the regular nominee. It was to their work that a large proportion of the vote for Colonel Livingston in the city is due to their

That's the way the result stood at the count of the tickets that had been dropped in the ballot box during the day.

HON. HENRY G. TURNER. pected it would be in the first, Livingston's majority being 120. The voting was very quiet, no disorder or confusion whatever happening during the day. The voters just simply walked up to the window, passed in their ballots and walked away again.

There were very few who were deeply inter ested enough to linger about the polls to offer their assistance in the ballot-casting act.

IN THE SECOND it was the same way. A casual observer would not have supposed there was an election or anything of that sort going on, judging by the handful of loiterers gathered under the wing of the courthouse.

Livingston got 383 votes and Haight 100. Some reports emanated from the precinct to the effect that Haight would certainly snow the democratic nominee under, but how ungrounded these reports were the figures eloquently show.

The tickets were gassed through the window very slowly all day long. At no time was there rush enough to even make the task of the managers even half way interesting. THE THIRD WARD.

The polls were opened promptly at the hour appointed, at Gregory's drug store, corner Frasier and Fair streets. During the early hours of the day things moved along quietly and smoothly, and it appeared as if the contest would be a very tame one. But in the afternoon the republican heelers began to get in their work, and from that time on the fight was spirited. Between 5 and 6 o'clock the negro laborers came in with a rush, but there had been some watchful democrats there, hard at work all day, so that when the pinch came they were prepared for it. The result was Livingston received a majority of 34 out of a total vote of 330.

DOWN IN THE FOURTH. The ward heelers got in their work down in the fourth ward. The negro politicians began early and worked late, and in spite of the exertions of the faithful democratic workers, the republicans rolled up a small majority. Out of a total vote of 372 Haight received 208 and Livingston 164, giving Haight a majority of 44. THE FIFTH WARD.

The voting in the fifth ward was done at a barber's shop on Marietta street, near Magnolia.

Throughout the day everything was ex-tremely quiet. So quiet, indeed, that persons moving along the sidewalk knew nothing of what was going on. Only 302 votes were cast. They were:

About 9 o'clock this morning his wife left home for a neighbor's house, leaving three children, aged one, three and five years, behind at the house. The youngest was left in charge of the oldest one, and while he was performing his duties the other was playing with the fire. In some way or other the child's dress caught on fire, and it rushed toward the bed, setting the flames to that, and in a few moments the entire building was covered with flames, the other children being barely saved. The alarm was sounded, but before the department reached the scene the house was consumed. The heroic work of the bucket brigade saved Mr. Moore's residence. A Child Burned to Death

It Takes Four Scars to Secure Exemption Dr. H. V. M. Miller's Letter to Penitentiary Physicians

Dr. H. V. M. Miller's letters of instr to the penitentiary physicians contains matter of interest to the public. In giving directions for the vaccination of convicts, he states facts not generally known, and facts which are of considerable importance. For this reason the letter is printed with the consent of Colonel John R. Towers, the principal keeper of the penitentiary.

The fact that the vaccination is going on in

After locking Alexander up, Officer Cunningham made a search of the premises and found a two-gallon tin can about full of corn whisky. This vessel usually set on the stove, and for this reason had escaped the officer's attention.

It is only a precautionary measure like the regulation that requires that all pupils in the Atlanta public schools shall have been vaccinated beore their attendance begins. Two cases were made against Alexander, and he will have a hard time to get clear of the fore their attendance begins.

The point in this vaccination upon which Dr. Miller lays especial stress is that exemption from danger is not secured with less than four vaccine scars. This is not generally known. As a rule a person who has one good scar thinks he is exempt from the contagion of smallpox. On this point Dr. Miller is very emphatic, and his confidence is based upon tatistics covering 100 years in England. The four scars are believed to give complete exemption-as much as a hundred could give hough the Germans vaccinate in from twelve to thirty places on one person before they are

Here is Dr. Miller's letter to the camp

Here is Dr. Miller's letter to the camp physicians:

ATLANTA, Ga., August 26, 1890.—Dr. ——: You are hereby instructed, as soon after the first day in September as may be convenient, to begin the work of vaccinating the poitentiary convicts under your supervision, and to proceed with it from week to week until all are secured from the ravages of the smallpox.

You will vaccinate only a few of them at a time, so as to interiere as little as possible with the efficiency of their labor as a body. You will especially vaccinate every new convict that is brought to your camp, and continue the work until every convict in the camp is vaccinated.

Experience has demonstrated that perfect exemption from danger is not secured with less than four gennine vaccine sears upon the person. You will therefore be particular to insert the virus which you use in six distinct places; all in one arm or three in each, as you may prefer. If this is carefully done is will secure at least four characteristic cicatrices. The four scars are considered as perfect a protection against smallpox as is a confluent case of that disease.

The virus for this purpose will be furnished to you upon your requisition by Dr. John B. Daniel, the agent of the state for that purpose. Your requisition will be addressed to Colonel John R. Tovers, who will approve and send the same to the agent of the state, who will forward the virus to you.

The matter sent by mail to you will be what is known as fresh bovine virus, upon quill or ivory points. A few of these points, perhaps a dozen, will be enough for you to begin with, and more can be ordered from time to time, as may be required,

Lymph (not containing pus or blood) from a vesicle on the arm of a perfectly healthy patient may be used in the vaccination of others with perfect security and efficacy.
The terrible effects of smallpox, introduced in any of the convict camps, would be so appalling that the utmost importance is attached to a compliance with this order, and your utmost care and attention are invited to it. Respectfully,

It will be observed that Dr. Miller makes another point in addition to the number of scars. It is that, in vaccinating from one person to another, the lymph shall be taken from a vesicle on the arm of a perfectly healthy patient. This is done when it has the appearace of a watery blister and before the stage of pus. Vaccine matter so taken is preferred to the bovine virus in England, though the latter is preferred in this country, because of the fear that blood poison or disease will be transmitted. The method of vaccinawill be transmitted. The method of vaccina or transmitted. In the melod of vaccinating from the lymph was well illustrated in Johnston's army during the war.

Dr. Miller, then medical chief of that department, received instructions to vaccinate a body of troops numbering about 10,000 men. The work was delegated to Dr. Cumming, who had been a fellow student with Dr. Miller at Paris. The method pursued was one peculiarly adapted to the circumstances of military life. First good bovine virus was procured and about a dozen healthy young soldiers were vaccinated. When the virus had taken effect, vaccinated. When the virus had taken elect, each of them was sent to a separate camp, and from the lymph on his arm a dozen soldiers then were vaccinated. The next crop gave enough virus to vaccinate a regiment; and so the work went on through 10,000 men. It was so carefully and thoroughly done that there was not a sore arm—that is, not a dangerously sore one in the whole army.

The special necessity for vaccination in the convict camps is apparent when you stop to think what would be the situation there in the think what would be the situation there in the event of an epidemic. It would be almost impossible to get guards for the prisoners; it would be almost impossible to isolate those taken quick enough to prevent the spread of the contagion through the entire camp. Then think what would be the result if a number of convicts should escape and scatter through the country after the contagion had fastened itself upon them, and while the disease was in a state of incubation in their systems. Until it broke out they would be like invisible firebrands, spreading disease and death wherever brands, spreading disease and death wherever they went. But at present there is no small-pox anywhere in this or adjoining states— none that the doctors know of nearer than Texas, and it hardly ever gets farther away Texas, and it hardly ever gets farther away than that. The present precautions, as said above, were not suggested by any knowledge of present danger, but by the peculiar dangers that surround a convict camp, not only for the convicts, but for the surrounding country, to which contagion, once in the camps, would be likely to spread.

Dr. Miller's letter conveys another important vices of information well worth remem-tant piece of information well worth re bering, and that is the place where virus may be obtained—the state agent, Dr. John B. Daniel, on Wall street, in Atlanta, whose duty it is to keep fresh and good virus, EX-OFFICER MIKE KELLY DEAD.

Minister's Cure

HOME, AND IN THE STREET. Cured by Cuticura JOEL HURT, President,

For about thirteen years I have been troubled with eczema or some other cutaneous disease which all remedies failed to cure. Hearing of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, I resolved to give them a trial. I followed the directions carefully, and it affords me much pleasure to say that before using two boxes of the CUTICURA, four cakes of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, I was entirely cured. In addition to my own case, my baby boy, then about five months old, was suffering with what I supposed to be the same disease as mine, to such an extent that his head was coated over with a solid scab, from which there was a constant flow of pus which was sickening to look upon, besides two large tumor-like kernels on the back of his head. Thanks to your wonderful CUTICURA REMEDIES, his scalp is perfectly well, and the kernels have been scattered so that there is only one little place by his left ear, and that is healing nicely. Instead of a coating of scabs he has a fine coat of hair, much better than that which was destroyed by the disease. I would that the whole world of sufferers from skin and blood diseases knew the value of your CUTICURA REMEDIES as I do. They are worth ten times the price at which they are sold. I have never used any other toilet soap in my house since I bought the first cake of your CUTICURA SOAP. I would be inhuman, as well as ungrateful, should I fail to speak well of and recommend them to every sufferer. I have spoken of them, and shall continue to speak well of and recommend them to every sufferer. I have spoken of them, and shall continue to speak well of and recommend them to every sufferer. I have spoken of them, and shall continue to speak well of and recommend them to every sufferer. I have spoken of them, and shall continue to speak well of and recommend them to every sufferer. The woman being scared and knowing the desperate character of Burns, helped him carry the corpse into the garden and hid it in the high grass and weeds, where it remained till next morning. In the meantime the whole community was out searching for the sing man. Burns then told his step-mother that if she ever told of the crime he would kill her. Burns then went to his home, a short distance away and Mrs. Burns went to Bearden's house, but said nothing about the affair. She pretended that she wanted to see Mr.

Bearden about selling him her farm. THE BODY REMOVED. She returned to her home in the afternoon and took her two little boys and spent the night with Bearden's family, about a mile distant. Next morning, Friday, she went to her house, and in a few minutes Mart Burns came along, and with threats forced his stepmother to help him remove Bearden's body from the garden. They took it to a branch close by and Burns washed the face of the dead man, and then they carried him about 150 yards from the house and laid him in the edge of an old field. The searchers had already gone over this ground in the morning. He was found late Friday evening. An Editor and a Reporter Settle Some Diffi culties.

ATHENS, Ga., November 4.—[Special.]— Editor Richard B. Russell, of The Evening Ledger, and City Editor E. J. Wade, of The Banner, came together last night in a warlike encounter. Mr. Wade had his arm full of papers, and was going home when he met Mr. Russell and Colonel J. M. Hughes. He spoke to Mr. Hughes, not recognizing Mr. Russell because it was dark. Mr. Russell asked to have a word with him and stepped aside. He asked Mr. Wade if he told his father that he have a word with him and stepped aside. He asked Mr. Wade if he told his father that he had given The Ledger two weeks' notice of his intention to quit the service of the paper. Wade replied that probably he had told him so. Russell then said:

"It's no use of your telling your lies."

Whereupon Wade replied that he would not take such words from him. Russell then repeated his words and struck Wade several hard blows on his head. It was all over in a minute or two and the combatants were separated. The affair was entirely unlooked for, as Wade had worked on The Ledger, which is run by Editor Russell. He quit some two weeks ago to accept a position on The Banner. Mr. Russell is in Atlanta, and hence has not given his side of the affair. There is a strong probability of the case being carried into court on the charge of assault and battery. The election passed off quietly to-day. Little or no interest was manifested in it. The Columbus Exposition.

Columbus, Ga., November 4.—[Special.]—
The Chattahoochee Valley exposition opens tomorrow at noon. Everything points to a brilliant success. Every foot of available space has been taken, and all of the departments are very fun. The county displays are very fine, and there are more tine horses than have ever before been seen at a southern exposition. The racing programme is decidedly the most attractive ever seen in Georgia, the purses are large and the racing will certainly be fine. The ground is literally filled with side shows and other attractions of various kinds. Miss Myrtie Peek is here with her running horses. The Fourth Artillery band arrived from Atlanta today. The city is full to overflowing with visitors.

He reported his loss to some white friends here this morning, and in short time he, perhaps, had more than his losses amounted to. THEIR TWENTY-FOURTH SESSION

ATHENS, Ga., November 4.—[Special.]—
Last Saturday night the festive students, full of hilarity and the natural effervescence of youth, following out the old-time tradition, and seeking to carry into effect the time-honored custom of ringing the college bell, waited until the midnight hour arrived and stole forth to consummate their design.

Slumber held in its embrace the people of the city, when a sudden clang, clang, clang, roused them to what they thought was the alarm of fire.

alarm of fire.

It was only the student at his old game of ringing the chapel bell.

Saturday night it was the noise that disturbed

But yesterday morning, alast how changed the order of things!
The boys were waiting for the prayer bell to ring. Some use it as a guide to get up by;
others to attend recitations, but all classes were disappointed, for the old, familiar sound did not greet their ears. Examination found that the interior of the bell was an aching

Welcome, by Governor W. J. Northen, for Georgia, responded to by Colonel Leonard Rhone, of Pennsylvania.

Welcome, by Colonel Hiram Hawkins, of Alabania, for southern granges, responded to by Hen. Alpha Messer, of Vermont.

Welcome, by Governor John B. Gordon, for the sump south, responded to by Colonel J. H. Brigham, W. M. of the N. Grange.

These welcome addresses and responses will be short, in order to listen to words of cheer from prominent members of other orders, and from Brothers Rose, Woodman and Ellis, also from The Journal and Constitution of Atlanta, and Southern Cultivator.

Arrangements have been perfected with the Southern Passenger Association, over its lines of railroad, to bring delegates and members to the convention for full fare coming to Atlanta, and one-third fare returning.

In order that each member may reap the benefits of this arrangement, he must get a certificate from the railroad agent where he purchased a through ticket, that he paid full lair to Atlanta. This certificate will be counteringed by Secretary John Trimble, and he will be able to purchase a return ticket for one-third rate. Without this certificate he will have to pay full fare returning.

Headquarters will be at the Markham and Kimball houses at $2 and $2.50 per day. Board can be had at the Metropolitan and other houses at $1 and $1.25. The sessions will be held at the hall of the Chamber of Commerce.

Every delegate who possibly can will leave.

that the interior of the beil was an aching void.

The clapper was not there. If the boy who took the clapper—if indeed a student took it—thought for a moment that he was getting off a good joke, he has, ere now, changed his mind on that subject.

The professors very pleasantly announced that it was a matter of indifference to them whether the bell rang or not, but that if they were tardy at their recitations they would be marked down accordingly. So, instead of a smile, a frown now ornaments the brow of many of the students. A reward will be offered by the boys for the bell clapper, and woe be unto kim that is found with it in his possession.

A one-cent a mile rate has been arranged to the exposition from Alabama, Florida, North and South Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia. Only one fare for the round trip from Atlanta. It will be very important for Mr. T. H. Kimbrough, manager of the Georgia State Grange, to know how many members and delegates will be present at the National Grange, and how many will go to the exposition from Atlanta. He wants this information to reach him at Cataula, Ga. by the 7th, or Atlanta by the 8th, care of Markham house, so that ample accommodations may be made.

It is hoped a delegation from every state, and a large one from Georgia and Alabama will be able to reach Columbus by 10 o'clock a. m. of the 11th, and look upon Georgia products, receive a warm welcome by Georgia people, and assist in welcoming those from other sections.

A GREAT EXHIBIT.

WHAT THE BROSIUS MOTOR SEWING MACHINE COMPANY IS DOING. Great Invention That Is Receiving Universal Praise—A Few Points

About It. It is not every one that is aware of the numerous and varied industries that contribute to the prosperity of Atlanta, and to the maintenance of a large percentage of her vast population. It is however, to these important factors that she must, in the future, as in the past, in a great measure, depend for growth and progress in the direction of material wealth and development.

We have just returned from a visit to the capacious and business-like manufacturing establishment owned and operated by the Broshs Motor Sewing Machine Company, and confess our astonishment at the magnitude of its dimensions, and the immense amount of machinery and special tools required to equip and put it in effective working order.

To the intelligent observer who visits this commodious establishment, there appears nothing of a sensational or experimental character. The company owns its factory, a handsome four-story brick building, with foundry and boiler-house attached, erected upon a two and three-quarter acre lot, and equipped with the latest and most improved tools and machinery in the United States.

It is absolutely free, we are informed, acre lot, and equipped with the latest and most improved tools and machinery in the United States.

It is absolutely free, we are informed, from all incumbrance, and that the company possesses abundant means to conduct its admirable enterprise to a successful and satisfactory termination, which it is proceeding to do with orderly and commendable zeal.

A number of the Brosius motor sewing machines have been in use in private families in Atlanta for a considerable length of time, and thus put to a practical test, in respect to ability and efficiency, have won full confidence in their adaptability to all the requirements of a perfect family sewing machine, to a degree that has never been accorded to any other machine.

Several of these machines were sent cast, and their introduction among the enterprising people of that section resulted in numerous orders for them. Five were sent to England, where machines run by hand attachments, and not by treafile, are largely in use, and were regarded there with the greatest admiration and favor. The exhibit of the Brosius machine at the recent exposition here resulted in a great triumph, for it was not only awarded first premium, but received the admiring appliause and favorable recognition of all who w thessed its easy, noiseless motion, the power of its motor and the perfect freedom from thresome exertion with which, with the simple manipulation of a small lever, it could be wound, and the facility with which its speed could be controlled and regulated. The power from which this machine derives its movements is embraced in a double set of springs resembling those of a clock, but, of course, much more powerful. These springs are so arranged as that one or both may be utilized, as convenience or necessity may dictate. With heavy sewing the combined power of both springs are brought into requisition, and with light work it is only necessary to use one spring. There are no belts, nor other incumbrances to produce friction in motion, and no power is therefore lost on that accou sarily attends the working of all treadic machines, however light and easy they may run.

This company is engaged, at must be remembered, in manufacturing a motor sewing machine, and not a sewing machine motor merely. This, of necessity, involves a great amount of work, and the time required to perform it can only be appreciated by sewing machine manufacturers.

With these combinations designed and manufactured jointly, so as to adapt each to the other completely and thoroughly, this company concieves, and rationally, it would seem, that better results must be attained than by an attempt to adjut a motor to a machine for which it was not originally intend d.

adjutt a motor to a machine for which it was not originally intend d.

Those who have the supervision of affairs at the company's factory are affable and agreeable gentiemen, and will take pleasure, no doubt, in showing visitors through their establishment, when all who have doubts as to the progress that is being made will realize how earnestly the work is being advanced.

Five minutes later Mr. Gibson, with trembling haste and his pockets full of revolvers ready for instant use, was burning his shingles in the alley. His case will come up before a meeting of the church officials next Sunday afternoon.

ATLANTA, GA., NOVEMBER 5, 1890.

Democracy in Georgia. We have met the enemy and they are ours!

The democrats of Georgia turned out yesterday and did their full duty.

It was the most interesting congressional race that we have had in a long time. For awhile the outlook indicated great republican activity in the fifth district. Forged documents, bogus tickets and sensational charges were circulated to injure Colonel Livingston, but the democratic hosts rallied, and snowed Judge Haight under with a shower of pallots. The fourth district ceased to be doubtful some days ago, and it was a foregone conclusion that Hon. C. L. Moses would be elected by a rousing democratic majority.

In the ninth district there was a hot three-cornered fight between Pickett, Darnell and Winn, but Winn's plurality will satisfy the democratic voters.

The contest between Dr. Fellon, Colonel Everett and Colonel Hardroves in the seventh excited general interest all over the state. It was a vigorous campaign between the two first named candidates, but the farmers and a sufficient number of their fellow-democrats stood by their nominee, and Everett carried the day.

Democracy in Georgia is triumphant, and has good cause to be jubilant. It has carried the state, including the two doubtful districts, and sends an unbroken delegation of ten democratic congressmen -Lester, Turner, Crisp, Moses, Livingston, Blount, Everett, Lawson, Winn and Watson.

Now for the lesson of this election. The result means something more than an emphatic protest against McKinleyism and Tom Reed's threat of bayonet rule. It means, if it means anything, that the members of the Farmers' Alliance constitute a loyal and influential force in the democratic party. It means that the alliance is at the front in the fight for democratic principles, and eager to follow the standard bearers of the party.

After this there will be no room for the doubts expressed by a few democrats in certain quarters. If the members of the alliance are not democrats they are nothing. Their fidelity to the party and their activity in its ranks in this campaign will settle their status for the future. The alliance democrats and all the other democrats are to be congratulated upon vesterday's work in our own district, and in the entire state from Tennessee to Tybee.

The unterrified democrats of Georgia are getting things in shape for another rousing victory in '92.

Mr. Crisp for Speaker.

The decisive victory of the democrats in the congressional elections yesterday not only kills the force bill and repudiates the republican tariff, but gives Georgia a leading place in national politics.

The democrats will have the pleasant duty of electing a speaker when the fifty-second congress convenes, and for this position Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia, is the favorite. His superb leadership of the democrats in the house brought him at a bound into national prominence, and in defiance of the tyrannical gag rules of Reed and his gang, he did valiant service for the party and the south. In him the democrats have a man whom they can trust, and a statesman on whose ability they can safely rely.

The election of Mr. Carlisle to the senate removes the only formidable competitor and leaves Judge Crisp with an open field. His gallant work in the east during this campaign has won him the support of the democratic members from New York and New England. He has an almost solid southern delegation at his back, and with these elements of strength at the start, his race is well nigh won in advance.

A Partisan Postal Service.

The Indiana newspapers are in trouble, and all on account of the partisan postal service in that state. Several editions of democratic newspapers have been suppressed by postmasters, simply because they contained matter detrimental to the republican campaign. This, of course, is not admitted by the officials who, in their interpretation of the law, have advanced other reasons for muzzling the democratic press.

Campaign supplements of The Bloomington Courier were excluded from the mails. The Indianapolis Sentinel says that these supplements contained perfectly legitimate matter, and were sent out by all democratic papers of the fifth Indiana district. No postmaster except the Bloomington man refused their transmission. Attention is also called to the fact that Tariff Reform, a legitimate periodical with a regular paid subscription list, is refused transmission through the mails as second-class matter, while, as The Sentinel says, thousands of copies of The Daily Courier, a republican campaign sheet, have been carried free as

"sample copies." There is a postmaster at Shelbyville who paign worker, and has disseminated repub-lican literature through his office every day. Campaign cards were placed in the boxes of patrons; all rules that ought to govern the postal department were violated, and the office was literally converted into republican campaign headquarters.

This is the way Mr. Wanamaker is running his side of the business. His postmasters are not servants of the people, but of a party. They tumble democratic newspapers out of the mails on the slightest pretext, and frequently on no pretext at all, while republican sheets, of whatever description, have free course and are glorified.

But Wanamaker is not alone in running his department in the interest of his party. The various departments of the government have all followed suit. The pension office has been prostituted to party purposes, and in the fight for votes the best interests of the government have suffered.

It is a queer state of affairs from Washton to Wyoming; a reflection upon the dignity of our government and a blot upon the record of the party that controls it.

The Verdict of the Country.

The voters of the country have rendered their verdict in the case of the People vs. Quayism, and it is in favor of the people.

For many months the republicans have been playing a desperate game. In congress and out of it they have thrown moderation to the winds, and dropping the convenient disguise of patriotism, have boldly advertised their purpose to hold on to power in spite of the will of the people. Emboldened by the audacity of Speaker Reed, the republican leaders have made no attempt to deceive the country by assuming a conservative attitude. They have perceived that they could only carry out their revolutionary policy by adopting revolutionary methods.

These methods were inaugurated when Speaker Reed took upon himself the responsibility of legislation. Whatever measure he considered useful or necessary to the republican party, he has passed through the house in the most highhanded manner. He has abused the dignity of his office and debased the honor that attaches to the speaker's chair. He has outraged justice and equity, and has unseated democrats, who were known to be fairly elected, merely in order to give the republican party a working majority.

For all of this the republican party is responsible. The blind audacity of Reed has been endorsed by the organs, and the partisan applause being as sweet incense in his nostrils, he has been led on to the commission of acts that could only be conceived by a rank partisan and sectionalist. When the Lodge force bill, the most vicious and iniquitous measure that has ever been concocted in this country in a time of profound peace, came up, he hurrled it through the house with the approval of his party. Through this pot-bellied and convenient medium, the republicans suppressed debate and made a farce of legislation.

The Lodge force bill was a direct challenge to the peaceful instincts of the country. The basis of its conception was the partisan desire of the republican leaders to inflame a sectional issue that has already outlived the patience of the people. Perceiving that the negro vote can not be relied on with any degree of certainty, and having discovered that it is not by any means amenable to the results of organization, Quay, Lodge, Reed, Harrison and the other leaders of the party undertook to contrive a method whereby the negro vote should be counted, whether it was cast or not. The simplest method, as well as the most outrageous, they found to be the practical disfranchisement of the white voters by counting in the republican candidate wherever there is a negro majority.

There were two reasons why this method commended itself to the republicans. One was that it would add largely to the republican representation in the house. Another reason, and one equally as important from a partisan point of view, was that the presence of federal deputy marshals at the polls with the intention, known and advertised, of counting out the democratic candidate. would lead to race collisions, each one of which would be a great help to the republicans in their campaign of fraud and corruption. It was seen that the whites and blacks of the south are getting along too well together-too peacefully-that they are on the point of coming to some common understanding. The outlook was not at all pleasant to the situation. There must be some remedy for such a state of affairs, and that remedy was thought to be found in the force bill, with its sharp sectionalism and its possibilities of violence. The public sentiment of the country condemned this infamous measure months ago, and now the people have condemned it formally, officially and finally.

Then there is the McKinley tariff law, which was rushed through the house with such unseemly and desperate haste by Speaker Reed. The country demanded the reform and revision of the tariff, and the republican platform promised the relief demanded. Instead of this the war tariff that was deemed too high, even during the struggle the north was making against the south, has been increased at all points. Under the old tariff, the average tax was 40 per cent; under the new it is 60 per cent, and the increase has been in all directions where it would add fresh burdens to the already overtaxed farmer and workingman. The protests against the McKinley law that have come from the farmers of the west and northwest were unheeded, and has been doing great work for the republi- yesterday they, in common with the peo-

Sample Tariff Talk.

It takes more than one kind of talk to de fend the McKinley tariff. From the way the two apostles of protection are flounder ing in contradiction of one another, they must be hard put to it to find arguments. Here is what they say: [McKinley, Oct 14, 1890.] [Reed, Oct. 15, 1890.]

Well, now they say you. They also ask me if would have things know of any article cheaper if you only had which has been lowered a democratic revenue in price by the tariff. tariff. Cheap! I never could spend the entire the cheaper of the cheap of the tariff. Cheap! I never could spend the entire liked the word. my opinion it rests upon protection. It is the protective tariff which tempts our inventors to work at inventing cheaper processes of manufacturing.

Truth is consistent, but error is continnally at war with itself. It has not been long since McKinley was arguing that his bill put more articles on the free list than any tariff law ever enacted in this country. Now he is denouncing cheapness.

Oh, what a tangled web they weave when thus they practice to deceive!

In Justice to Meriwether County.

There seems to have been some misunderstanding about a remark quoted from Senator Joe Terrell in vesterday's Constitution. and in justice both to the senator and the sterling county of Meriwether, this correction is made.

Senator Terrell was quoted as saying that a suballiance of Meriwether county had endorsed Johnson for congress. The quotation was made from memory and may not have been entirely accurate. Senator Terrell says his remark was that a member of the suballiance had told him that some members of that alliance would vote for

The supposition of that member seems to have been an error, for Meriwether, instead of giving 300 majority for Johnson, has rolled up about that much for Moses.

A Man of Nerve.

Among the remarkable murderers of our time Reginald Birchall, now under sentence of death at Woodstock, Ont., takes the lead as a shrewd schemer and a man of nerve.

When he decoyed Benwell into the swamp and killed him for his money he managed the job so well that his conviction had to rest upon circumstantial evidence alone.

After he had been sentenced Birchall lost none of his cheerfulness and confidence. His busy brain revolved plots and plans for his deliverance, and the publication of the mysterious letter from Michigan containing what purports to be a confession of the mur der from a confederate who fired the fatal shot, has puzzled the public not a little. The letter, however, is now generally believed to be the work of the prisoner himself, and it suits his past record for forgery and deception.

People find themselves regarding this man with wonder and consternation. He is a young fellow, well educated and apparently of a light-hearted, genial disposition. With the gallows overshadowing him, and the knowledge that a broken-hearted wife will be left behind him, he keeps in good spirits, and is the life of the jail where he is confined. He wastes no time in mourning over his fate. Every day he spends several hours on his biography, and seems to take as much delight in its composition as a popular novelist would feel in his work. When the sketch is published Mrs. Birchall will receive $1,200 for it, and the murderer doubtless feels that he deserves great credit for making such an arrangement for the woman whose life he has blighted. The money will probably be all that he has honestly earned and devoted to a good object since his marriage.

Perhaps such men as Birchall are morally insane. They eat, drink and sleep as if they had nothing on their minds. They give no sign of remorse, and meet their punishment with firm nerves, dressing for the scaffold as they would for a holiday occasion. Criminals of this class are no ordinary men. They are either moral monsters or their self-control is abnormally developed. As a study of one of the darkest and most terrible phases of human nature the Woodstock murderer can hardly be surpassed.

The World's Consumption of Cotton. The most interesting portions of Mr. Ellison's Annual Review of the Cotton Trade, which was issued at Liperpool last week, have been cabled to The New York Financial Chronicle, and that paper makes an interesting summary of them:

The average weight of the deliveries in Great Britain during the season just ended was 465 pounds per bale, or six pounds heavier than in the preceding year, when the average reached 459 pounds, and twentynine pounds greater than in 1887-88. The continental deliveries this year averaged 442 pounds, which is three pounds more than in 1888-89, and ten pounds in excess of 1887-88. Moreover, the total indicates that European spinners have taken this year 165,469,000 pounds more than last season. Great Britain's increase being 96.166,000 pounds. On the continent the gain has beeen 69,303,000 pounds, which follows an addition in the previous year of 114,802,000

As Great Britain recorded a falling off last year of 27,428,000 pounds from the takings of 1887-88, her actual addition in the two years has been only 68,738,000 pounds, whereas the continent for the same period shows an excess of 184,105,000 ounds-a truly remarkable growth.

The average weights of the leading growths for the season of 1889-90 were: American. 466 pounds; Egyptian, 682 pounds, and East Indian, 396 pounds; and these compare with American 465 pounds, Egyptian 693 pounds and East Indian 398 pounds in 1888-89.

The returns from India, as found in the annual report of the Bombay Mill-owners' Association, reflect the very rapid strides cotton manufacturing is making in the far east. On June 30, 1890, there were work ing, and in course of construction, 137 mills, an addition to the manufacturing plant of ame period spindles had increased 511,678 and looms 1,851, and the consumption of 889-90 exceeded that for the previous year by 119,808 bales, having risen to 1,008,462 bales of 392 pounds each.

There has been a decided growth in the world's consumption of cotton during the past twelve years. A comparison between 1878-79 and 1880-90 shows a gain in the aggregate of nearly 60 per cent. During this ame period the gains in the various countries have been: in Great Britain, 40 per cent; continent, 631 per cent; United States, 53 1-10 per cent, and India, 277 per cent. Mr. Ellison estimates that the world will require in 1890-91 from all sources 9,964,000 bales of the average weight of 455 pounds, making 11,336,000 bales of 400 pounds each. And on this basis an American crop of 7,434,000 bales of ordinary weight will be

Mr. Ellison allows for additional takings by the mills in Great Britain 74,000 bales, on the continent 130,000 and in the United States 67,000 bales, all of the average weight of 400 pounds.

There has been an increase in the spinning power of the world of 1,710,000 spindles, all the countries sharing in the excess.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

MR. ROBERT P. PORTER may say what he pleases. The American people are not satisfied with his census, and they are not likely to be. Democratic New York city is evidently undercounted 200,000, and Georgia and Alabama are credited with only gains of 291,586 and 245,568, re-spectively. Republican Vermont, which has noto-riously lost population, is credited with a gain of eighty-one persons. These figures will not be accepted by the country. The whole census is discredited, and is not likely to be quoted as authority. It has been twisted either by partisanship or incompetency.

VIEWS AND INTERVIEWS.

"Augusta is doing the largest cotton busi-ness in her history," said Hon. Charles Estes, president of the King Cotton mills, at the Kimball the other day. "The city is simply one mass of cotton. The warehouses are crowded and the streets are packed with it. Up to Saturday evening we had received 104,-444 bales, and in my opinion we will get not less than 240,000 bales this season, or 30,000 more than Augusta has ever received hereto-

"The total cotton crop of the country last year was 7.313,000 bales. This year it will reach 8,556,000 bales. I account for it in this way: The crop being particularly good this year, the acreage that produced seven bales ast year will produce eight this year, and the increased acreage of about 3 per cent will produce the balance. Already the total reeipts are greatly in excess of this date last year, and I am confident my figures will prove practically correct."

We learn from the republican press that the general advance in prices is not due to the Mc-Kinley law; also, that there has been no advance in prices; also, that the advance in prices is only temporary, and that the "flurry" will soon be over; also, that the advance in prices is a good thing for the country, because a cheap coat means a cheap man under the coat, etc., etc., etc. The struggles of the republican press with the prices question as highly electrifying.

Mr. McKenzie left Athens Monday on the Northeastern railroad, and The Athens Banner had the following account of his departure

"Mr. S. W. McKenzie left Athens yesterday at 6 o'clock, taking French leave of his employers. No reason is assigned for Mr. McKenzie's singular action, and he even neglected to say good-bye to any of his friends. He made two distinct statements to two different parties about his future intentions, saying positively he was going to one place to one and to another place to another. Why he left Athens remains wrapped in mystery, but it nay be that he was summoned off suddenly by a telegram or important business."

It turns out to be very important business in which Mr. McKenzie has entangled him-MR. HODGSON IN ATLANTA. Mr. Asbury Hodgson came to Atlanta yes terday and called at the express office for the letter, having secured information from the

The Athenseum was ablaze with merriment and sleasure Friday evening, and, as is usually the case with this excellent club, it even surpassed this excellent calls, it even surpassed itself in the charming manner of entertaining and the unbounded hospitality for which it is noted.

The occasion was an elegant reception tendered by the club to Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Morton and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bloomfield. This week the gayeties will continue. On Friday evening the R. P. club, composed of several young ladies of the Classic City, will give one of its enjoyable dances at the residence of Professor Charles Morris.

This event is looked forward to with a great leal of pleasure by those who are so fortunate as to have received invitations.

There will be another interesting debate at the Lucy Cobb institute Friday evening, and judging by former occasions like this, it will be highly en-tertaining.

The subject to be discussed is, "Was Hamlet mad?" The Lucy Cobb institute affords a splendid training to its pupils, in the works of Shakespeare, Dr. A. U. Lipscomb giving them the bene it of his splendid knowledge of these plays.

The character of the melancholy Dane will be horoughly discussed, and the young ladies of ach side will vie with each other for the mastery. The Juvenile Missionary society of the First Methodist church will give a lunch party this week at the residence of Dr. John A. Hunnicut.
Dr. J. G. Armstrong, of Atlanta, is booked for another lecture at the opera house on the night of the 7th. He has made a fine impression on our people, and numbers his friends by the score. AT THE OPERA HOUSE. Milton Nobles's melodrama, "Love and Law," was presented last evening to an enthusiastic audience. In this play there is a decided vein of comedy, well set off by some exceedingly pathetic scenes, the drama being of the firmest construc

His forte on the stage is certainly in comic roles, where the full power of his versatile and conscientious impersonations are to be felt and admired. In this play the comic situations are seldom forced or strained, the whole being one effort in every day realism.

"Love and Law" was funny from the start, and forced or strained, the whole being one effort in every day realism.

In the role of the witty Irish lawyer, Felix O'Raff, Mr. Nobles did some very effective work. The whole house applanded him in each scene. Louis Harwood made an excellent personage out of the Italian organ grinder. Messrs. Ready, Laring, Fessler. Clarke and Young made the best of their roles. Miss Lizzle Lambert was very charming in the person of Ritta, an Italian street singer. Grace Page, Florence Vinton, May Bardell and Mary Davenport gave evidences of good training and won universal approval.

In 1879 the Gate City Guard made a tour f the principal northern and eastern cities. nong the most pleasant episodes of that visit was the reception of the Guard at Pough-

They spent several days there, and were the guests of the city in every sense of the word, as the entire city turned out to receive them and to make the visit as pleasant as possible.

True to their tradition, the Guard are always foremost in welcoming visitors to Atlanta, and attending to their entertainment while here. It necessarily follows that the Dayy Crockett

Veterans will be royally entertained when they come to Georgia's capital by their generous hosts, as well as the city at large. DESIRE THEIR HISTORY.

A letter was received from The Seventh Regiment Gazette, of New York, requesting that the Guard furnish them with a history of the company, to be published along with historical sketches of other famous companies in A committee was appointed to furnish The Gazette all the necessary information on which to base a complete and accurate history of the Gate City Guard from its organization up to

It will prove very interesting to all who enjoy perusing the records of bravery and chivalry, as the record of the Guard is of the brightest in the history of southern military organizations.

MORMONISM IN GEORGIA

YOU ARE NOT OBLIGED TO GO TO

To Find Disciples of Joseph Smith and Brigham Young, They Are Right Here at Our Very Doors.

From The Albany (Ga.) News. Mormonism in Georgia.

Mormonism in southwest Georgia. It is hard to believe, but nevertheless it is true, if what a gentleman told a reporter yesterday is true, and the reporter has every reason to believe it is true, for the gentlem citizen of an adjoining county, and stands high as a man of strict integrity. It doesn't matter how the subject came up, but, anyhow, while

THE DEVIL IS WITH US.

"I have always been taught that 'charity begins at home,' and I am rather disinclined toward contributing to send men to foreign lands to save the heathens, when we have good missionary ground right at our very doors, yea, in our very midst. We need all the help we can get to! Christianize our heathen next door neighbor, and as long as we have these it looks to me like the rankest inconsistency for us to send our laborers to distant fields, when the harvest is white or black, just as you please, within reach. What's the use of sending men to our antipodes, to Burma, to 'India's coral strand,' or to any other seaport town, when we've got plenty of people here who need to have the gospel of regeneration dinged into their ears.

IT IS OPENLY PRACTICED. "Why, sir, would you believe it, in my county, Mormonism is openly practiced by a man who is regarded with some consideration by his neighbors from the fact that he has accumulated considerable property.

"This man is the satisfied possessor of two wives, or at least he so regards them, and two sets of children. Both of these families live in one house, and from persons who are familiar with the circumstances of their exist-ence, they move along without friction, and both of the women answer to the name of Mrs. H. In keeping house these women take it turn about, so to speak, one keeping house one week and one the next The man who stands at the head of this household, as I said before, is regarded with a certain degree of respect, at least so much so that people have shut their eyes to his bigamistic enterprise and no effort has ever been made to bring the law to recognize this violation of its majesty. And this is not the only instance of the kind that I can cite you to.

"Now, I submit, if a country where such relations are tolerated and countenanced is not rich missionary ground, what is it?"

APPOINTMENT OF STATE SCHOOL COMMISSIONE R.

EDITOR CONSTITUTION: I think that Governor Gordon acted wisely in appointing Judge Hook state school commissioner. Those who object to Judge Hook as school commissioner, object to him on the ground that he has never been a My opinion is that the qualifications of Judge

My opinion is that the qualifications of Judge Hook for state school commissioner are better and greater from having spent his life as a lawyer and jurist than if he had spent it as a teacher. I wish to give my reasons for this opinion. Now, I wish it understood that I have no coutest with teachers. I will have none. I was a teacher eight years myself, and my partialities are all in their favor. They are a noble set of men—engaged in a noble work, and, as a class, are devoted to their work, and deserve the good opinion and gratitude of all and deserve the good opinion and gratitude of all men. But there are certain effects on the minds

They are a noble set of men—engaged in a noble work, and deserve the good opinion and gratitude of all men. But there are certain effects on the minds that follow teaching that no man can avoid.

Let us notice some of these effects. The first year or two of a man's teaching is an improvement to him. His education will become more thorough and his mind may more or less improve. But he soon becomes so familiar with the whole course of instruction, with every branch of study he instructs in, that his mind might be said to be in a condition of almost absolute rest. There is no effort required to master the subjects before him, and the worry and trouble he passes through, and the thinking he does, if we may so call it, in hearing recitations and conducting his school, is barren of mental improvement. Like the horse in the bark mill, he has the same round all the time. What he sees today he will see tomorrow, what he sees today he will see tomorrow, what he sees this year he will see next year. Men are constituted mentally and physically alike. It is by effort and exercise that we gain strength. If the arm is not used, it will wither and become weak. So will the mind. The human intellect never attains its hi hest strength—never reaches its maximum development—without it is kept up to constant, healthful and vigorous effort. We are often disappointed in our expectations of first-honor graduates. This is what becomes of many a one of them: Having a superior education, and perhaps a superior mind, he is qualified to teach, and to teach well, and he is induced to enter that profession, and like the squab or young pigeon, he is as big at the beginning as he ever is afterwards. He will pass his life very much respected, and be considered, all the time, a man of fair abilities. While another member of his class, with an education not sufficient to qualify him to teach, of necessity perhaps, goes into some other business or profession where his mind is drawn out into active thought, and is constantly and vigorously employed,

Then his mind will expand and enlarge and strengthen, and he will have correct views of things.

But those engaged in teaching frequently have the leisure and inclination to extend their education. And they continue to learn and read and study until their minds may be stored with almost all knowledge. Still the truth remains that those who spend their lives too much in the schooroom or in the study, no matter what their vocation or profession, are deficient in practical sense. Men may go on learning until they are versed in all the sciences; may learn a dozen languages besides their own—may become familiar with all classic authors, both ancient and modern—may be able to measure the planets and trace their circuits, and calculate the distances and the size of the stars—yet, as regards all practical, common sense business of life, they are mere bables. They get learning without wisdom. The opinions of many learned professors and distinguished divines are often more like the hallucinations of men afflicted by aberration of mind, than the opinions of beings endowed with reasoning faculates. There is no accounting for such men! A learned and distinguished divine at one time, by a short speech, changed the result of a presidential election. He thought his little speech was the very thing to carry his favorite candidate into the presidency. Yet, it defeated his candidate.

was the very thing to carry his favorite candidate into the presidency. Yet, it defeated his candidate.

It was my fortune to receive my education at an institution presided over by a gentleman who had been an able lawyer and an eminent jurist, and had been a distinguished judge of the superior court. He was also a gentleman of fine scholarship and literary attainments.

At the age of fifty he was made the president of the college. He did not get to the institution a day too soon. It had been governed and managed and directed by teachers, professors and ministers, and the whole concern was well-nigh shipwrecked. He righted the sails, adjusted the ballast and eventually brought it safely out of the storm. And today, as the result of his labors to a great extent, at that critical period of its existence, that institution is second to but few at the south, for the number of its students, and for its reputation and standing as an institution of learning. The legal training that the gentleman I speak of had received, seemed to have given him the wisdom necessary to sustain him in his new position. Wisdom marked every act of his administration. He was competent for every emergency. Even the instructions he gave, as a teacher, were the best I ever heard from the lips of any man. His mind seemed to grasp all things. After ten years he resigned the presidency to engage in literary work, but was prevailed on to take charge of another college in another state, and then of another, and finally of the fourth one; and his literary work, on account of the demand for his services at these colleges, had to go undone. He was thus the president of four different colleges, in four different states, and presided over all of them with marked success and with eminent ability. His fitness for the positions he occupied, and his great success in filling them, was the outgrowth of the excellent training his mind had received at the bar and on the bench, and from his quick, vigorous powers of thought that he had acquired in the intellectual combats he passed through with such men as Berrien, Judge Law, Richard Henry Wild, Joseph Heary Lumpkin, Judge Clayton, William C. Dawson and others.

I have referred, in this sketch, to this distinguished individual for this reason: Judge Hook's life has been very much in line with his. Judge Hook had the sauge long practice and the same success as a lawyer. He ha! the same thorough and excellent mental training at the bar and on the bench. And it all constitutes for him qualifications for the office he now holds that he could have received nowhere else, and in no other way. He is a gentleman of courtiy manners, genial and well educated, and of fine literary taste and acquirements. He and I having lived on opposite sides of the state, I never saw him until after he was appointed state school commissioner. Calling to see him on business, I was much impressed by his strong and sensible views, not only on the subject of education, but on government policy generally—on the tariff, on the currency and the evils of our national financial system, and on the remedies necessary to correct existing evils. In this connection, he anticipated many questions which have srice aritated the public mind, and which have arisen in the upheaval that has produced the alliance and has disturbed the laboring classes generally. So impressed was I with his opinions that, on arriving at home, I wrote to him s conversing with the reporter yesterday, he

The Life of a Congressman. In a speech which Congressman Tarsney is using considerably during the campaign, says The Kan-sas City Star, he explains the arduous duties of a congressman in the latter half of the nineteenth century. He says that many times during the last session he has seen the glory of the sunshine in the east before his head sought his pillow. They say the present and prospective congressman wa delivering his speech in Johnson county the other evening, and succeeded finally in holding the au-dience in silent attention until he came to the picture of the all-night toil. Mr. Martin stands on one leg, and Mr. Smith remarked: "I was within four feet of him when he lost his other leg at Bentonville, and there is not a nobler, truer gentleman than Mr. Martin."

Mr. Wilson, the old doorkeeper, who is running again after an interim of two years, knows the ropes and is working quietly and steadily for the place. He carries one empty sleeve and is well known from his long service in the house. It is rumored that he has made a strong combination with a Coweta county man, who is backed by the Hon. W. Y. At-

Ex-Senator DuPree was still claiming to be a senator yesterday. Steve Clay once more trod the pavement in the rotunda, and, as always, he moved like proughbred. He is a magnetic man and always has a knot of friends about him. His face seldom lacks a smile, and yet there is on his countenance an ever present air of the man-militant on his guard at all points and equally ready for a joke or a trial of strength, as the case may be. "I am devoting myself to my practice," said he, "and have retired from politics; but I have come here to help friends who helped me. I always pay my debts."

Dr. Fisher, of Oglethorpe, came up to work for his brother-in-law, Judge Hines. Not in politics himself, he does not mind rolling up his sleeves for a friend. He and ex-Senator Jim DuPree are a team.

Ex-Senator Foster is on hand moving about among the members of the senate. He has not announced his object, but it is whispered that he is up to something. He was one of the famous crew who went to Savannab with the Chatham county delegation.

Doorkeeper Martin and Mr. Copeland, the alliance traveling man and lecturer, are run-ning together for the position of doorkeeper and assistant doorkeeper of the house.

It has been remarked that only one county returns the same delegation it sent last year. That county is Monroe, and Berner and senator from that district, is also from Monroe. "Forsyth," he said, "is an old seat of culture. Dr. H. H. Tucker began the practice of law there; it was the home of John E. Dawson, Charles Mallory, Shaler Hillyer and a number of men who have become dis-tinguished in Georgia." The town, by the way, is named for one of the greatest states men Georgia ever produced-John Forsyth.

Hon. J. R. Lumsden, the veteran legislator from White county, came back yesterday to take his seat in the house once more. It has come to such a pass in White county that the election of Mr. Lumsden is regarded by the voters as a matter of course, and truly in this instance it is a case of the office seeking the man-and a mighty good man it finds in Mr. Lumsden. He is popular among all the boys, and in his hands the interest of a faithful constituency is well preserved.

Four years ago the people in the second did not turn out. Crisp received less than 2,000 votes, and the republicans used this to his embarrassment. But there is a giant obstacle in the way of one unbroken line connecting the two hemispheres, and that is Behring straits. Mr. Gilpin's proposition is to bridge these straits, which is all well enough in theory, but quite a different thing in practice. At considerable expense the straits can undoubtedly be bridged, as an island lies about midway between the American and the Asiatic shores. The distance is not great and the water shallow, the government charts showing the greatest depth to be only thirty-two fathoms. But could a bridge be built high enough to allow huge icebergs to pass under it, and with strength to withstand the greatice floes that are yearly swept down through the straits from the Arctic cean. The current is sweeping through the narrow straits from one great sea into another very swift and strong, and great icebergs would be borne against the bridge, its piers and abutments with a force that neither steel nor mason work would stand against.

Captain Emery, of the United States ship Thetis, stated that the only practicable means of crossing these straits at all seasons of the year is by tunneling under them.

Given the Cortland Wagon Company.

The Cortland Wagon Company, of Cortland, N. Y., made its first exhibit south at the Piedmoni exposition this year. The exposition itself will be long remembered and take prestige over any former year for a large and varied display of carriages, buggies, spring wagons and other vehicles. In this department, as well as in all others, the exposition has been a phenomenal success. Over sixteen factories—the largest of their character in the world—were represented at the exposition, and their displays were the finest ever seen in this country. It is doubted if there ever was a greater aggregation of fine vehicles collected before than the one shown here.

To stand in the front rank in such a wilderness of fine work is indeed an honor to be coveted. The Cortland Wagon Company have by the decision of the excellent judges in this department, as well as by the sentiment of an appreciative public, been awarded these medals for the excellency of styles, superiorty of finish and attractiveness of display.

These medals were properly placed. The display of this great vehicle company has been from the first the cynosure of all eyes, and to enumerate the favo table remarks passed upon it would occupy more space and time than we can well give. It seemed to be generally admitted by those most capable of judging, that the goods of this company by reason of their excellent quality, elegant proportions, superiority of finish and reasonable prices are admirably suited to the trade of the general public throughout the south.

A BLENNEBHASSETT'S ROMANCE. Court Proceedings by the Granddaughter of the Famous Harman.

St. Louis, Mo., November 4.—An extraordinary case has developed through the filing of an application for a change of name by Miss Theresa Blennerhassett, a member of the historical family of that name. The petitioner is the daughter of Richard S. Blennerhassett, the convertient of the Blennerhassett, the daughter of Richard S. Biennerhassett, the youngest son of the Blennerhassett of Burr conspiracy fame. She states in her petition that October 10, 1871, at Odin, Ill., she was married to John Calvin Adams, and lived with him until November, 1871, but that at the instance of her family she kent her, marriage a secret. Here vember, 1871, but that at the instance of her family she kept her marriage a secret. Her husband was killed a few weeks after the marriage, and so, still at the solicitation of her family, she continued to be known as Theresa Blennerhassett. In August, 1872, she gave birth to a female child, who was always known as Mary Blennerhassett. Petitioner says her mother and all the other members of her family are dead, save a twin brother, and her family patronymic is a historic name of which she is justly proud. Moreover, she has acquired property since her husband's death, the title of which is invested in her maiden name of Theresa Blennerhassett. her maiden name of Theresa Blennerhassett. her maiden name of Theresa Biennerhasset.

She went on an ostensible visit to relatives at Odin, and there met and married her lover, and together they went on a flying trip to the east. She returned to her home on account of the sudden illness of her mother, and arranged with her husband to follow her in three weeks. He did so, but was thrown from the train by an accident and killed. The world was in ignorance of the clandestine marriage, and was unfortunately kept so, even after the birth of the child. The advent of the little one was kept a secret, and Theresa Blennerhassett in due time announced that she had adopted a little girl. Her child has grown up in ignorance of her true relation to her foster mother, and is now a beautiful girl of eighteen. The present proceeding, which lay bare a family secret, are brought as much to protect the girl and insure her title, as they are to satisfy the mother's longings to have her legal status defined. Theresa Bleunerhassett is now about fifty years old, and has always been looked upon as an old maid.

The East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia system will thus secure possession of a rich feeder, as the Richmond, Nicholasville, Irvine and Beattyville road passes through a very rich part of the State. an Exhaustive Paper Showing the Condiens as the Engineers Found Them-Estimates of the Cost. Hall Bros. have completed their survey of ong Island creek.

The report was recently received by Judge George Hillyer, chairman of the committee on gravity water supply, and, together with is and drawings, has been placed on file at the manager's office:

"We have made the following surveys:

"I. A compass survey entirely around the water-shed of Long Island creek, computing the area of reservoir which can be made by building a dam my feet high near the mouth of Long Island seek and allowing the water surface to stand five below the crest of the dam, or forty-five feet deep just above the dam. This survey gives the form and size of the reservoir.

3. A survey with transit and level of a route for a pumping main from the mouth of Long Island creek to the proposed service reservoir at the head of Woodall creek, near Van Winkle's

We have made these surveys with reference to plan given to us by you for investigation, which plan is briefly stated as follows: PLAN.

eq. Purchase the entire watershed of Long Island creek, and stop the cultivation of the soil in order to allow the forest to grow again.

2. Erect near the mouth of the creek a dam sufficient to impound all the water that falls on this watershed and finds its way into the creek.

3. Erect near this dam a pumping plant to be operated either by steam or by the water power of Randall's shoal on the Chattahoochee river, which is near at hand and available.

ADVANTAGES OF THE PROPOSED PLAN.

"The following are some of the advantages claimed for the proposed plan:

"I. A supply of good, pure water not exposed to any possible containination in the future, and absolutely controlled by the city.

"2. The pumps will be located on the banks of the Chattahoochee river, where river water could be used if the supply in Long Island and other creeks that can be brought into it should prove insufficient in the future.

"3. Randal's shoal in the Chattahoochee fugnishes a good and sufficient water power for driving the pumps, thus avoiding the perpetual expense of buying coal.

"4. The mouth of Long Island creek is at the end of a long, high ridge known as the Dunwoody ridge, upon which the proposed Amicolola canal can be located in case the river water should be found unfit for use when the necessity arises for a greater supply than can be furnished by Long Island and other creeks in the vicinity. In this case the pumping main proposed could be used as part of a gravity conduit from the open canal to the VanWinkle service reservoir

"5. In case it is decided to place the pumps on the Chattahoochee river at the mouth of Pea htree greek, water from Long Island creek can still be wed, as it can be taken to the pumps by gravity either in a pipe or in an open canal.

WATER SUPPLY OF LONG ISLAND CREEK.

"We find, by actual survey, that the Long Island watershed contains 4,150 acres. The soil of this entire watershed is peculiarly suitable for the pumposes desired. It is a gray soil, containing a very watershed contains 4,150 acres. The soil of this entire watershed is peculiarly suitable for the purposes desired. It is a gray soil, containing a very large quantity of sand and fractured quartz. In fact the entire surface is so thickly covered with this broken quartz that it forms a good rip-rapping to prevent washing. The bed rock of the country seems to be coarse, imperfect granite that contains a very large percentage of silica, and disintegrates on exposure to atmosphere, forming a heavy hominy soil which does not wash into gulies and contains very little of the yellow clay that stains the water of most of the other creeks in this vicinity. Long Island creek is a clear crystal stream running on a white sandy bed all the way, and made from large cold springs. We made an accurate weir measurement of the water flowing in the stream, which gave a depth of two and one-half inches over a weir ninety-two inches long. This shows a flow of 1464; cuble feet perminute, which is equal to 1.579,500 gallons per twenty-four hours. This is simply the ordinary flow of the stream when not swollen by rains, and only shows the amount the creek would furnish without impounding any of the flood water. In order to find the full amount of water that can be obtained from the watershed, we proceed as follows: According to the statistics of Commissioner Henderson, the annual rainfall for this region is forty-nine inches, the same being a ten years' average. This over an area of 4,150 acres (the area of the watershed is cleared and in cultivation, and that the hills are precipitous and the distance for the watershed is cleared and in cultivation, and that the hills are precipitous and the distance for the watershed gives a total of 5,520,000,000 gallons. Owing to the fact that not over one-half of the watershed is cleared and in cultivation, and that the hills are precipitous and the distance for the water to run is short, we can safely say that at least 60 per cent being a very large allowance for direct evaporation and percolation entire watershed is peculiarly suitable for the pur-

RESERVOIR. "The reservoir as located by our surveys requires a dam across Long Island creek, near its "The reservoir as located by our surveys requires a dam across Long Island creek, near its mouth, 50 feet high and 458 feet long at the crest. The hills shut in very close together, so that the highest part of the dam will be very short. There is a small gap in the ridge south of the dam, which makes a natural spillway or overflow for storm water. In making our survey for the area of the water surface we located the surface line five feet below the crest of the dam, and found that the water would cover 162.7 acres, and the capacity of the reservoir wou doe 257,000,000 gallons. We think it advisable, however, to make the reservoir large enough to hold a six months' supply at 5,000,000 gallons per day, or 1,460,000,000 gallons. This would require a dam about nine feet higher than the one surveyed, and the water last above the dam would have a deepth of fifty-four feet high, its crest would be about 550 feet long, and a small dam or embankment would be nece-sary at the gap selected for spillway. In comparing the following estimate with the estimate made by us for a dam and reservoir on North Peachtree creek, it will be noticed that the conditions are totally different. The watershed of Long Island being much smaler than that of North Peachtree, there is much less chance of breakage from freshets, and in case of a break here the water would flow at once into the Chattabooche river, and would do no more damage than is ordinarily done every year by hich water. On the other hand, the bridge, on North Peachtree, would be a very serious matter. Hence, it was necessary to use a much larger factor of safety there than at Long Island. The dam here should be made of clay and gravel in layers, and well packed by the carts, and have a clay puddle wall in the center, beginning far enough below the surface of the ground to cut off all leakage. The dam is to be lapsting fare relowed to be impropped with stone.

Estimate one, and an outer slope of one and a half come; outer slope to be impropped with stone.

ordinary water, and it will probably never be less than 800 horse power at the time of lowest water.

"We surveyed and have made a map and profile of a route for a pipe line from the mouth of Long Island creek to the proposed service reservoir at the head of Woodall creek, near Van Winkle's shops. The line is necessarily a crooked one, as we followed the ridges where it was practicable to do so. The line by this route is seven miles and 3,340 feet long. We also find that various short cuts can be taken to decrease the distance, by adopting which the length of the entire line will be only seven miles and 1,740 feet. We have also drawn a straight line from the proposed pumping station at Long Island treek to the resurvoir site at Van Winkle's, showing that a straight pipe line would be approximately six miles and 2,820 feet long. In our profile chart of the proposed work we have drawn two hydraulic pressure lines, one for a delivery of 8,000,000 gallons per day through a 30-inch main, and one for a delivery of 10,000,000 gallons per day through the same. A very large proportion of the line is subjected to light pressure where thin pipe can be used. The pressure head on the pipe at any point will be the hydrostatic pressure nead plus the head that is equivalent to the resistance due to friction on the pipe from said point to the discharge end of the pipe. This latter head, known as the friction head, will be greater for a 10,000,000 gallon supply than for an 8,000,000 supply, as the velocity is necessarily greater and the friction is thereby increased. We can use this line as a base and get a much better route on location. If desired the water from Long Island creek can be taken to the proposed pumping plant at the mouth of Peachtree creek in an open canal about four niles long, using flumes around the rock bluffs, at a cost not exceeding $50,000. Very respectfully, "HALL Bros., Civil and Mining Engineers."

How to Gain in Flesh.

How to Gain in Flesh.

It is not what one eats that makes one fat, but the food that is properly digested and assimilated that increases the flesh. The food that lies and ferments in the stomaceh or passes undigested in the viscera, does the system much harm, as they say, it makes a man thin to carry so much effete matter around with him. In order that there be a full and thorough digestion and assimilation of food, the stomach, the liver and the kidneys must be kept in the finest condition. These great organs of life frequently need the aid of various herbal juices. It is to them what oil is to machinery. It crables them to do their work with less friction. It is this friction that wears out mechanical machinery as well as the machinery of life. Now science has discovered the herbs that naturally aid the movements of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. They are contained in that efficacious remedy known as Dr. Bull's Sarsaparilla. If you are in a state of ill-health give it a trial and see how much better you will feel.

May Be Saved if You Will Think of Yourself a Moment and Then Act.

Ulceration of the bowels, usually called "itching piles," is a very common affliction, and not causing much pain is usually considered of small importance, and the disease is allowed to develop into a very grave affliction. The symptoms of this trouble are moisture and itching around the anus, pain across the hips (low down), d.arrheza, and irregular bowels, pain in lower part of same, indigestion, and a long train of nervous symptoms, differing in nearly every case); and in the female, who are more liable to be affected than the male, many symptoms usually attributed to female diseases. This disease is a very fruitful cause of many diseases refusing to yield to the treatment of your physician, and places you on the list of "incurables." The results of neglecting this affliction are terrible to contemplate, a general impairment of health, frequently so slow as to be scarcely noticeable, derangement of the nervous system, unfitting you for business or enjoyment of pleasure, the development of cancer and stricture of bowels, or loss of power of controlling same when happily death intervenes and relieves the sufferer of histortures. This is a terrible pleture, but a true one. You may by neglect make this your own; can you take the risk when a cure is offered you? Treating rectal diseases exclusively for a number of years, I am able to offer you a cure without the usual pain attending the treatment employed by one who has not the experience in treating these diseases. The mode of treatment lemploy for their cure is mild and is not unpleasant in anyway, as I use neither knife or caustic applications. I have cured many, and I am willing that they should tell you of my success if you wish it. I can furnish you their names if you prefer it. On my past success I am willing to stand or fall. Can I offer you anything fairer? If you wish to investigate what I have said, I extend to you an invitation to consult me, (free of cost,) and I will prove all I have

A great many people in Atlanta are impressed with the idea that we do not run book accounts, that we are strictly eash. This is a mistake, we run thirty day accounts, and are proud to say that we number amongst our patrons over 600 of the best families in Atlanta. On last Saturday, October 25th, we furnished food for nearly 3,000 peo ple, just think of it, 3,000 people. Aside from supplying Barnum's entire circus of 765 people, feeding them six meals, Saturday and Sunday, we supplied from our stock over 300 families in Atlanta. All day long a steady trade, transient pat-ronage also selected such things as best suited their taste; reckoning six people to the average family, and we have 1,800, add at least 200 transsient customers and the 765 Barnum's circus at-taches, and we have a grand total of 2,765, nearly 3,000 people, who dined upon the best in the land. This is a grand recoad, and we thank the people of Atlanta for their generous patronage. We run thirty day accounts and would be glad to have as many more customers as we now have. We furnish only the best, select groceries; nothing leaves our store that is not first inspected and approved. During this month new goods will be constantly arriving, and we invite your inspection. We have furnished, also, during the past two weeks all the fancy delicacies that adorned the reception tables of five recheche entertainments. Nothing but the very best would suit their respective fastidious taste, and we are glad to say thit we firmly believe that our house is the only one in Atlanta that could have furnished the quality desired.

The friends of Hon. Anton Kontz announce him as a candidate for the mayoralty of Atlanta. They point with pride to his record as a citizen, as a business man, as an officer, as a public servant and as a friend. Atlanta needs a man of nerve, of probity, of high personal character, who relies upon his own judgment, and who cannot be swerved for mayor. Such a man is Anton Kontz, and as such the suffrages of the people are asked for him.

The following is the unique epistle, as penned by the hand of a man dying for love:

LEAK ON LOVE.

He Draws a Pretty Picture, and Labels It "Perfect Love." For The Constitution.

Kind reader, did you ever go out into a garden and sit beneath a tree laden with blossoms, and on one of the boughs there would be a bird singing and swinging, and thinking, perhaps, about four little speckied eggs warmed by the breast of its mate. Singing and swinging, and the music in bappy waves rippling out of its tiny throat, and the flowers blossoming, the air filled with perfume, and the great white clouds floating in the sky? Have you, I say, and if so, amid these scenes, think back over the misspent days past and gone, and-

"How strange that the hands that might lead us To heaven, refuse us their hold, That the dear lips that whisper "God speed us, Are the lips that are first to grow cold."

But as the bird has ceased its song, the clouds floated westward, and the son bending low, a rose-lipped daughter by your side whispers:

"Yes, love, I'll lead you to the dawning, Just there is the heavenly light. And how little the glorions morning Knows the sorrowful shades of night."

Oh! love, you are all this world to me.

I had rather live in a hut built of love, with a vine growing over the door, and the grapes growing purple in the kisses of the autumn sun. I had rather be a poor peasant, with my love by my side, smiling as the day dies out of the sky, than to live in a palace without love. Holy writ tells us that God is love, hence all true

Holy writ tells us that Godis love, hence all true leve must come from and have its source in Him. The little helpless babe first learns to love its mother, because her sheltering arms afford protection and her loving breast the nutriment of life. As it grows it soon learns to love its father, its sisters and brothers, and then its playmates, and when youth is attained it soon dearns to love somebody else's sister or brother, and then:
"Two bouls with but a single thought,
Two hearts that beat as one."
They are united in the holy bonds of wedlock.

They are united in the holy bonds of wedlock. The family tree is planted, and grows like the majestic oak, around which the tender vine clings in loving embrace.

Men are oaks, women are vines, children are flowers. And among the holiest altars in all the wide world is the fireside around which gather father and mother and the sweet babes.

I like to see the little ones at the table and hear each one telling of the wonderful things he has seen. I like to hear the clatter of knives and forks and spoons mingling with their happy voices. Be honest and fair with little children, be just, be tender, and they will make you rich in love and joy.

Think of the little children who turn pale when voices. Be honest and fair with little children, be just, be tender, and they will make you rich in love and joy.

Think of the little children who turn pale when they hear their father's footsteps; the little children who run away when they only hear their names called by the lips of a mother; little children who run away when they only hear their names called by the lips of a mother; little children—the children of poverty—the children of crime, the children of prounds of the children of crime, the children of prounds of the children of crime, the children of prounds as of life, my heart goes out to them, one and all.

When your child commits a wrong, take it in your arms, let the child know that you really and truly and sincerely love it. Yet there are some people, when a child commits a fault, drive it from the door and say, never do you darken this house again. Think of that! And then these same people will get down upon their knees and ask God to take care of the child they have driven from home. If I were a father I would never ask God to take care of my children unless I was doing my level best in that same direction.

But I will tell you what I would say to my children: "Go where you will; commit what trime you may; fail to what depths of degradation you may; you can never commit any crime that will shut my door, my arms or my heart to you. As long as I live you shall have one sincere friend."

I like to think of love in that way; I like to think that love is eternal; and to love in that way and then go down the hill of life together, husband and wife, and as you go down, hear the laughter of grandchildren, perhaps, while the birds of joy and love sing once more in the leafless branches of the tree of age.

And at last, becoming worn and weary, you lay down by the wayside and, using your burden for a pillow, fall into that dreamless sleep that kisses down the eyelids still—surrounded by kind and faithful friends, by those you have loved—you will pass away peacefully and calmily, while on your forehead

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk, the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician I began the way of and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradica-ted."—L.
